HATTIE LE BLANC TRIUMPHS

ST. JOHN, N. B., April 22.—Hattie Le Blanc went through the trying ordeal of examination at the hands of Samuel D. Elmore, the lawyer representing Mrs. Glover in the will contest brought by the slain Waltham laundryman's brothers, to-day in such heroic fashion that she surprised even the Canadian commissioner before whom her deposition is being taken.

It was a most exhaustive interrogation, but the little Canadian girl who has been acquitted of the murder of Clarence F. Glover came out of it unscathed, and even triumphant.

Many of the queries put to her were of so intimate a character that Commissioner Kerr excluded them as "insulting." Other questions the girl simply "refused to answer" on the advice of her counsel.

More than 300 questions were put to the witness by Elmore at the forenoon sitting alone. Not once did the young woman seem embarrassed, and at no query did she show any hesitation. At all times she exhibited balance and wonderful self-control. Her friends are jubilant over the way she has come out of the ordeal—the most unconcerned of the entire lot.

There is great interest over the case in this city, and, as might be expected, public sympathy is entirely with the girl.

The questioning of Hattie Le Blanc by the commission sent from Boston to take her deposition for use at the trial of the contest over the Glover will, which starts in East Cambridge Monday, was resumed at 10 o'clock to-day.

The hearing was set for 9 o'clock, but did not start until an hour later. Lawyer Edward P. Berry, for the contesting brothers, was suffering from asthma due to the strain and the bad weather. Commissioner Kerr, who is also fire chief, was delayed by two small fires to which he had to go.

Miss Le Blanc was up early. She and Miss Alice Morrell, the interpreter, took a long walk before the hearing started. Hattie is much changed in appearance. She is more robust, and the color has come back to her cheeks which were colorless during the trial at East Cambridge.

Wonderful Story by Girl.

Lawyers for both sides to-day declared that they are highly pleased with the progress made. Yesterday Lawyer Melvin M. Johnson, counsel for Hattie during the trial that freed her of the charge of murdering Glover, was barred from the hearings. He saw her, however, before she went before the commissioner.

It is apparent that Hattie is telling a wonderful story. Those who were present intimate that she was self-possessed, that she has her story well in mind and that when her questioners attempt to go beyond it she refuses to answer.

Attorney Elmore said to-day:

"The evidence that Hattie has given will be an unexpected and decided help to the case I shall present at the will fight."

Yesterday many of the questions that were asked by Mr. Elmore were excluded by Commissioner Kerr as insulting. The questions all related to the details of Hattie's early life.

Eyes Are Improved.

To-day Hattie wore a dark blue serge suit. It was very becoming and contrasted prettily with the high color in her cheeks. The day she arrived here she had her eyes tested again and has gotten a new set of glasses. Her eyes are much improved.

There is great interest in her case, and the Glover will fight locally. People here all believe in Hattie. They declare that she is too young and innocent to have killed Glover. Captain Charles Powell of Dalhousie, an old friend of Captain Peter King and of Abram Le Blanc, Hattie's father, is here during the hearing. He says that the people of West Arichat have every confidence in the girl.

Yesterday the work of taking the report of the hearing became too heavy for Miss Morrell, the stenographer. Miss Alice Dus-

POLICE ON THE HUNT FOR CRAP-SHOOTERS

"Crap shooting must stop," is the edict of the police of the Dudley street station. For a number of months complaints have been made to the police that men and boys have been desecrating the Lord's day by gambling with dice on side streets, parks and playgrounds and frequently quarrelling over their losses and winnings. Plain clothes men will do duty to-morrow.

WOMAN A CAMORRA WITNESS

VITERBO, April 22.—The Assize Court to-day listened to a plea of innocence from Maria Stendardo, the only woman prisoner among the Camorrists who are on trial with their reputed head, Enrico Alfano. According to the allegations of the State, Maria Stendardo's resort in Naples was a headquarters for the Camorra, and many of their darkest crimes are said to have been planned there.

The prisoner, a comely Neapolitan, scornfully denied these allegations.

"My hotel was frequented by the best society in Naples," she declared. "I am an honest woman, and I maintained my establishment as a high-class place. It is untrue that criminals gathered there."

The woman followed Vincenzo Arolio and Antonio Parenoco on the stand.

The former, who has a smattering of the law, was dressed in his best clothes and took advantage of the opportunity to deliver a long oration on the injustice being done. He filled his harangue with quotations from the Latin and would have taken up the entire sitting if President Bianchi had not ordered him to cease.

Parenoco denied that he is a member of the Camorra and swore that he knew nothing of the murder of Gennaro Cuoccolo and his wife.

SILENT CAPTIVE POLICE PUZZLE

Overpowered by a policeman after a fight early to-day, a man who refuses to give his name or to utter a word since his arrest is locked up in the Watertown police station. He was arrested after he had chased several women near the Bemis railroad station. The police believe him to be an escaped patient from an institution for the insane.

Patrolman Vernon S. Brown was near the Bemis station when he heard screams of women. They pointed out the prisoner as a man who had annoyed them. Brown caught up with the man, who said: "I am done for, that is all." The station master went to the aid of the policeman, as did Patrolman Burke. The two policemen and the station master overpowered the prisoner and tied him hand and foot with ropes. He immediately became uncommunicative, and the police have been unable to get a word out of him.

In his pocket the police found a card of a union marked in the name of "J. M. Morgan." They also found a pay envelope containing $9.30. The man is very well dressed and is about thirty-five years of age. An effort to ascertain who he is is being made by the local police. The pay envelope was marked in the name of James McDermott.

WOMEN EXTINGUISH FIRE IN WHISKERS

DANBURY, Ct., April 22.—After his clothing and beard had been set on fire by an electrical spark, Sidney H. Smith, an electrician and inventor of this city, escaped death by discarding his burning garments in the street. Women formed an impromptu fire brigade and beat out the flames with brooms. Mr. Smith was badly burned about the head and body.

'JAKE' WENDELL PASSES AWAY

Jacob Wendell, Jr., member of the famous New York family of which Professor Barrett Wendell of Harvard is perhaps the most prominent representative, died to-day at his home, No. 116 East Thirty-fifth street, New York city. He was suffering from an acute attack of pneumonia following a nervous breakdown, and two doctors were in constant attendance.

Jacob Wendell, Jr., was perhaps the foremost amateur actor in America until he joined the New Theatre Company. He was the leading spirit of the Comedy Club of New York, an organization of society people who are serious students of the drama, and in the club productions he achieved far more than local fame. When the New Theatre Company was formed he was persuaded to join its ranks and made a remarkable success in the prominent roles in which he was cast. He had a chief part in the recent production of Josephine Preston Peabody's play, "The Piper."

When the New Theatre Company disbanded, Mr. Wendell, who was a man of large wealth and fonder of the theatre than of business, became a member of the company organized to produce "What the Doctor Ordered," a new play by A. E. Thomas. Tuesday night when the play was given a trial at Trenton, N. J., Mr. Wendell appeared in it, but complained of grip. Next morning he was so ill that he was unable to leave his bed and pneumonia rapidly developed.

GOES TO LAW FOR BOOK ABOUT "OWLS"

Herbert A. Kenny, a Boston attorney and recording secretary of the Suffolk Nest of Owls has filed a suit against George T. Perry asking an injunction to prevent the latter from disposing of a record book of the order. He seeks to have Perry inform the other Owls where the book is or return it. Kenny alleges that Perry had the book on December 1, 1910, when the Massachusetts Nest changed its name to the Suffolk Nest. The book contained the doings of the Owls since they organized in November, 1909. An order of notice was issued returnable May 1.

Y. W. C. A. HAS AIDED 13,000 GIRLS IN YEAR

More than 13,000 girls have had some definite contact during the past year with work of the Boston Young Women's Christian Association, according to the 45th annual report. Seven hundred and forty steamers have been met and 2,310 girls travelling alone given friendly aid. Five hundred and seventy-seven permanent boarders have been cared for in the two girls' homes. Hundreds of girls have taken advantage of the educational courses.

VINCENT CLUB GIRL WEDDED

Another Vincent Club girl joined the bevy of Easter brides to-day when pretty Vrylent Gill became the wife of Wilson Olney at Emmanuel Church at noon. The church was beautifully decorated with greenery and lilies, the profusion of decorations about the chancel making a pretty setting for the petite bride in her gown of heavy white satin and veil of tulle.

Miss Gill is the daughter of Mrs. George F. Gill of Marlboro street, where a small reception was held after the ceremony. The bride was unattended.

Mr. Olney, who is a Harvard, '07, man, is the son of Mrs. Peter B. Olney of Far Rock, Lawrence, L. I. Peter Olney, Jr., Harvard, '03, was his brother's best man, and Sigourney Butler Olney of the Harvard Law School, who took his A. B. degree last June, headed the group of ushers.

RUSTLER-BROOKLYN GAME CALLED OFF

BROOKLYN, N. Y., April 22.—The weather man prevented Fred Tenney's Rustlers from getting another chance at "Bad Bill" Dahlen's Trolley Dodgers here to-day. The rain started here late last night and continued this morning. In a short while the field looked more like an inland lake than a ball park.

When the game was called the greater number of the visitors went to see the sights of Gotham. Fred Tenney is elated over the showing made by his team so far this season. "Give me a couple of reliable slab artists and there would be no stopping us. nI all of our games this season we have hit just as well as our opponents. The pitchers are slowly rounding into form. Then watch us."

TENEMENT FIRE PLOT CHARGED

Revelations of a professional band of firebugs who burned tenement houses for small sums of money when owners or agents wished to collect insurance money were made to-day, according to the police, in the remarkable confessions of Hyman Jershy and Max Garfingle, two Boston men, who were captured when, it is charged, an attempt was made to set fire of a twelve-tenement house in East Cambridge. Ten persons were asleep in the house at the time the alleged incendiaries are accused of placing oil-soaked waste in the attic of the house.

When arraigned before Judge Almy in the Cambridge Court, Jersky immediately pleaded guilty. Garfingle protested that he had never been in the house and that he knew nothing of the crime. Judge Almy entered for him a plea of not guilty. Neither of the accused was represented by counsel.

David Pearlstein, the owner of the house, who is also under arrest, was represented by Attorney Morris Tobey of Boston, who declared that his client did not wish to enter a plea at this time.

Prisoner Worth $200,000.

Judge Almy asked Captain McBride under what bail he wanted the man held and the police captain suggested $2,000, which was agreed upon, after Pearlstein's counsel had told the court that his client is worth at least $200,000 and that he is well known as a prominent citizen of Chelsea and a heavy owner of real estate in Chelsea, Arlington and Cambridge.

The case was set over until April 28.

"We were to get $100 for this job," confessed Jersky to Captain John McBride, the latter declares. "We were to split even.

"We were hired by a man for whom we had done similar jobs before. We came out to Cambridge with this man on April 19 and looked over the site. We made our plans for firing the building. I didn't bother to ask how many people lived in the house. I saw a lot of children around the place, but it didn't concern me if they lived there. The same man had worked in the burning of a house on Leverett street, Boston. He got $168 for that job. We got away all right and no one suspected.

Hunting for Fourth Man.

"I didn't want to work on this Cambridge job, at first, but the boss told me that he did good work at Leverett street, where I think one person was killed, and he said it was easy money. He said he had made a contract with a man for this job and that he had to do it. I finally consented to work with him and Garfingle."

Jersky broke down and cried several times when making his confession. He was confronted by Captain McBride repeatedly with damaging evidence before he consented to tell of how the job was done. The captain showed a five-gallon can of naphtha and two two-gallon cans of oil and a lot of oil-soaked waste which had been found in the house where the men were at work.

Garfingle also broke down and told a similar story to that of Jersky. The latter lives at No. 2 Brighton place, Boston, and is forty-two years old. He has a wife and five children. Jersky is forty-three years old and lives at No. 35 Barton street, Boston. He has a wife and seven children.

Denial by Pearlstein.

The police of Greater Boston are searching for the missing man, who is charged by Jersky and Garfingle with being the "boss" of the job, and who is said to have made his escape. The police have his name and an excellent description of him. He is said to live in Boston.

The house which the men are charged with attempting to burn is in the heart of a tenement house district.

It is located at No. 9 Fourth street, East Cambridge. It is within one hundred yards of Police Station 5, East Cambridge, and

REPORT DIAZ READY TO QUIT TO END WAR

Peace Coming to Mexico Within a Week if Madero's Terms Are Accepted

WASHINGTON, April 22.—Dr. Gomez at 1:45 this afternoon issued the following formal statement:

"I am in receipt of a telegram to-day from General Madero, telling me that an armistice has been agreed upon between himself as head of the Revolutionary party, and Senor de la Barra, representative of the Mexican Federal Government.

"A commission will be appointed by both sides to discuss permanent peace plans. Pending the appointment of a peace commission and the discussion of peace all hostilities will cease on both sides. This means that the federals will continue to occupy Juarez and that the revolutionists will not abandon their position about the city. I am not at liberty to state in detail what the terms of peace will be. All that will depend upon possible agreement through mutual concessions honorable to both parties."

Expect Diaz to Retire.

While it is too early to predict the actual terms of peace, it was learned to-day from reliable sources that if General Madero can be induced to end the war and help put down the disorder in northern Mexico, President Diaz will agree to resign. He will retire only when complete tranquility is restored.

If the rebels reject this proposal, Diaz will fight on until either the federals or revolutionary forces are crushed.

Dr. Gomez explained how peace negotiations would be carried on. General Madero will suggest certain matters on which he will insist. These will be transmitted here to Dr. Gomez and he will in turn put them into shape and have them conveyed to Minister of Foreign Affairs de la Barra, who will act on them after consulting with other members of the cabinet. Meanwhile rebels and federals will rest on their arms.

When the news of the armistice at Juarez reached here to-day, feeling of relief were apparent at once. The main question now is "Can Madero deliver his army?"

Lawless Element in Army.

Though his forces are the only ones maintaining any discipline in the revolution, they include a lawless element whose appetite for loot has been strengthened by Madero's promises that he would capture Juarez. Reports reached here to-day in advance of the armistice news that a large number of the insurrectos were on the verge of mutiny because of the delay in attacking Juarez.

Secretary of War Dickinson today received a telegram from Colonel Steever at El Paso, saying that he had captured 27,500 rounds of ammunition which was being smuggled into Mexico. The secretary granted permission for twenty-five wounded Mexican soldiers to proceed in a special car from Agua Prieta via Douglas and Naco, to the hospital at Cananea.

The message sent by the El Paso insurrecto junta from Madero's camp, near Juarez, was as follows:

"Taking into consideration the actual situation, General Madero accepts the armistice proposals covering the zone of Juarez in order to negotiate peace in conferences that are to follow."

Immediately on receipt of Madero's dispatch Dr. Gomez telegraphed the news to Senor de la Barra, minister of foreign affairs, at Mexico City. He then wired to Madero through the El Paso junta for complete instructions covering the armistice negotiations and subsequent peace conferences. Dr. Gomez was greatly elated over the message from Madero and believes that peace is now actually in sight in Mexico.

DAVIE IS DUE HERE TONIGHT

Robert E. Davie, the youthful broker charged with a $500,000 stock swindle, who was captured in Rio Janeiro after his flight from this city over six months ago, will be brought back to Boston late tonight or tomorrow morning. Davie, in charge of Inspectors Pelton and Burr, who went to Brazil to get him, arrives in New York on the Holt Line steamship Byron late this afternoon. The party will take a train immediately for Boston.

Davie's return winds up the police chase for him that lasted many months and during which every large city in the world was covered. He was finally traced to Rio Janiero, identified there by the American consul and extradited after considerable difficulty.

Extradition Complication.

As soon as Davie had been held by the consul at Rio Janeiro Governor Foss communicated with Secretary Knox and asked for extradition papers to bring Davie back. It was found then that the extradition treaty between this country and Brazil did not include larceny, with which Davie was charged.

Letters were exchanged between the local authorities and those in Washington. It was explained that larceny and embezzlement, the latter an extraditable charge, were the same under the laws of this State. New papers were made out and his extradition was asked on the charge of embezzlement. This was secured and two months ago Inspectors Burr and Pelton sailed from New York to bring Davie back.

Friend of Evangelist.

Davie's victims included some of the most prominent men and women in Boston and Brookline society. Many church people were among them. Davie maintained a fine home in Brookline and entertained lavishly. The Rev. J. Wilbur Chapman, the revivalist, was Davie's intimate friend.

12 IN PERIL AT ROXBURY FIRE

Twelve persons were near death from suffocation during a fire which caused a loss of $300 in the four-story wooden tenement building at Nos. 517 and 519 Roxbury street, Roxbury, early to-day.

The blaze started in the rear wall of the fruit and candy store of Anthony Speleotopulos on the first floor and burned up into the second, which was unoccupied. Smoke which rolled up through the building cut off the escape of the persons living on the two upper floors.

Mrs. Katherine Kroesen, seventy, an invalid who lives on the top floor, was asleep in a rear room when the fire was discovered and was carried to the front of the building by her son, John Kroesen.

A man saw smoke pouring from the basement windows and notified Patrolman Thomas Lyons, who sounded an alarm.

Martin J. Murphy helped his wife and four children to the street. Mrs. Benjamin Cotter and her two children and Miss Annie Herald, a visitor, on the third floor, were awakened and all started down the stairs for the street. They only got as far as the second floor where they found the smoke so thick they were unable to breathe. They returned to their apartments, and shutting the door leading into the halls, opened the windows.

The firemen checked the fire before it had spread beyond the second floor.

MILDRED BLACKLEY, SOMERVILLE GIRL, CONTEST CANDIDATE

MILDRED BLACKLEY

GET BUSY NOW IN BIG CONTEST

By the CONTEST EDITOR.

How many of us realize what a will o' the wisp, fickle thing is this goddess—OPPORTUNITY? Here to-day—and gone again, to return—perhaps never!

One thing is certain—OPPORTUNITY is here in our midst right now, and will remain with us one short week. The OPPORTUNITY to get the magic "two for one" is open to candidates for one short week only.

Every single subscription turned into the Contest Department from to-morrow until Saturday, April 29 at 10 p. m., will count just twice its regular value. At no time during this competition will there be another offer as great as this one.

An $8,000 home, a touring automobile a handsome piano, a speed power boat—these are only a few of the rewards that are to go to those who heed the call of "OPPORTUNITY WEEK."

NOW—to-day—this very minute—is the time to secure one of the coveted positions in the contest. Let your slogan be: "Now or never, two for one, and all for ME!"

Subscriptions should not be held out by candidates until Saturday, the last day of OPPORTUNITY WEEK. Send them in as fast as you get them together. The sooner we get them the better for you, as there will be a delay in sending our orders back to subscribers if all candidates turn in their subscriptions on the last day—and delays are bad for everybody, contestants most of all—who lose vote coupons by the process.

Now, all together! Make no mistake! Let there be no delay! This is the one best chance of this contest to secure the leaders' positions.

An earnest young worker who intends to be heard from in District 2, is Mildred Blackley of Somerville. She says: "You'll be surprised when you see my vote total after OPPORTUNITY WEEK! This is the just the chance I have been waiting for."

American Girl Wins Against Paris Police.

PARIS.—In front of the Church of St. Philippe de Roule, on the omnibus, pretty Miss O'Meara of Chicago was arrested on a charge of the non-payment of three cents under a new zone fare ordinance. The Chicago girl was not informed of this and refused to pay. She was led to the police station. "You have plenty of money, why did you refuse to pay the three sous?" queried the magistrate. "Because I decline to be bullied, and I refuse to be a party to petty extortions," she replied. Miss O'Meara at once wrote a letter to the prefect of police, M. Lepine, and the prefect ordered the policeman to go to the Hotel Dysart, where Miss O'Meara rested, and apologize to the girl. The omnibus conductor was also compelled to apologize.

Spanish War Veterans Dine.

HAVANA.—Old comrades in arms of Captain O'Brien, affectionately called Dynamite Johnny, were entertained here by the Spanish War Veterans. Dr. D. T. Laine, the camp commander, presided at the dinner. Among those present were Generals Nunez and Valez and Colonels Aguirre and Hernandez. Gen. Monteagudo, commander of the armed forces of Cuba, and others paid flattering tributes to Capt. O'Brien.

Corean Annexers Rewarded.

TOKIO.—The Marquis Katsura, the Prime Minister of Japan, and the Marquis Tokudaiji have been created princes, and Count Komura, the Foreign Minister, has been made a marquis. Lieut.-Gen. Viscount Terauchi and Viscount Wanatabe have been made counts. All these appointments have been made ostensibly for the services of the statesmen in bringing about Corean annexation.

New Post Would Suit Boutell.

LONDON.—Henry S. Boutell, ex-Congressman from Illinois, who was appointed United States Minister to Portugal on March 1 and later notified that he would be sent elsewhere, sails to-day for New York. He said that he had not heard officially that he was to be sent to Switzerland, but that if the appointment were made it would be gratifying.

Portugal's Subsidy Terms.

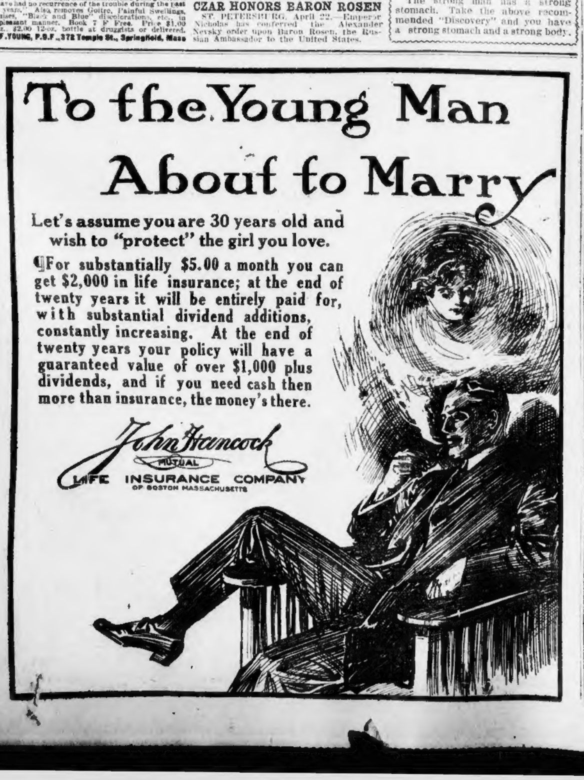
LISBON.—The provisional government publishes the conditions of the bids for the Lisbon-New York steamship service. The maximum subsidy will be $1,000 for each journey to New York and the same for the return journey. The contract will be for three years. The vessel must carry mails.

Special Notice.

MAKES FRIENDS.

There is no way of making lasting friends like "Making Good"; and Dr. Pierce's medicines well exemplify this, and their friends, after more than four decades of popularity, are numbered by the hundreds of thousands. They have "made good." For a torpid liver with its attendant indigestion, dyspepsia, headache, perhaps dizziness, foul breath, nasty coated tongue, with bitter taste, loss of appetite, with distress after eating, nervousness and debility, nothing is as good as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

The strong man has a strong stomach. Take the above recommended "Discovery" and you have a strong stomach and a strong body.



To the Young Man About to Marry

Let's assume you are 30 years old and wish to "protect" the girl you love.

¶For substantially $5.00 a month you can get $2,000 in life insurance; at the end of twenty years it will be entirely paid for, with substantial dividend additions, constantly increasing. At the end of twenty years your policy will have a guaranteed value of over $1,000 plus dividends, and if you need cash then more than insurance, the money's there.

KELLY ESCAPES MURDER CHARGE

Coleman E. Kelly, formerly Councilman from Ward 13, had the charge against him for the killing of Jeremiah Mahoney on the morning of April 19 reduced to manslaughter when he was arraigned to-day at the continued hearing before Judge Fallon in the South Boston District Court. He was admitted to bail in $5,000, which his counsel, Michael F. Creed, stated would be furnished by Kelly's mother and one other person whom Creed did not name.

The crowd of women and men who lingered outside the court house waiting for Kelly to be liberated were disappointed, however. Mrs. Mary Kelly had hurried to the court with her other sons and a friend, Mrs. Catherine Gorham. Mrs. Kelly qualified on the bond with $6,000 of real estate, but Mrs. Gorham, who had plenty of cash and securities, was not accepted because she has no real property.

Kelly was remanded to the Charles street jail, while his lawyer and relatives went out to find another person who could qualify on the bond.

After several witnesses had been examined as to the fight in C street that resulted fatally, Attorney Creed moved that the charge be changed so that his client might be admitted to bail. Captain Dugan of the Criminal Investigation Bureau consented.

Kelly listened calmly and with an occasional smile as to the witnesses. After the perfunctory story of Medical Examiner Leary that Mahoney had come to his death as the result of violence, Patrick Coyne, who was present when the street fight occurred after the wedding celebration, told of meeting the prisoner just after 5 o'clock in he morning. Kelly told him he had been to a wedding the night before, had been "licked" and was going to "get back" at someone. Coyne says Kelly started away and was met by Mahoney and Daniel Manning, who made at him. Coyne says that he saw part of a knife blade in Mahoney's hand and that when Kelly broke away from a grapple with Mahoney he picked up a brick from the sidewalk and threw it. Mahoney fell and Kelly ran.

The testimony of Manning was substantially the same, except that he made no mention of a knife. He declared that Coyne and Kelly were the aggressors and that Kelly had started to throw the brick at him when he seized Coyne and held him as a shield. Kelly, he said, then threw the brick at Mahoney, striking him on the head.

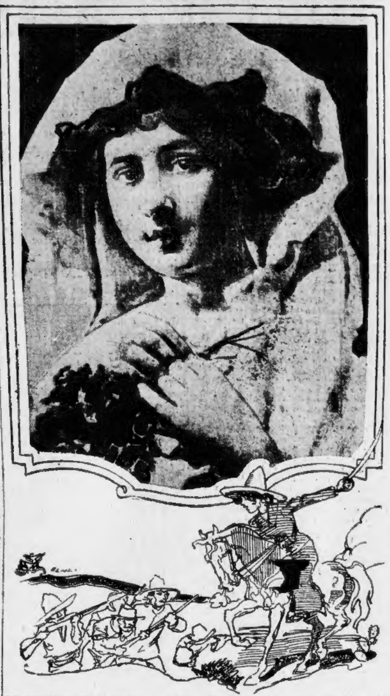
Mexican Rebels' "Joan of Arc"



The Mexican girl, daughter of Canturo Neri, formerly a general in the Diaz army, is in command of a troop of 700 Insurrectos. According to reports she led them in a series of battles with the Mexican Federals and displayed remarkable daring.

HOW NURSERY IS IMPOSED ON

Surprising testimony was given at a Supreme Court hearing on a petition of the Day Nursery to turn over its property, valued at $20,000, to the Boston Dispensary. Mrs. Mary Morton Kehew, vice-president of the Day Nursery, charged that a certain class of foreigners imposed upon the management of the nursery.

"In some of the cases we investigated," she declared, "we found that these foreigners were writing home to their people in another country and stated that children were cared for free of charge in this country. These people imposed on us by sending their children to us to care for. Then, being free from care, they went out to work and hoarded up money. When they got enough they returned to their native country to spend their earnings."

The Tyler Street Day Nursery, located at No. 62-64 Tyler street, is permitted to turn over its property, for the purpose of carrying on a children's hospital in the buildings, but the funds are to be kept intact until further order of the court.

In handing down this decision in the case, following the testimony of several witnesses, Judge Loring said: "The situation is such that it is not feasible to continue to carry on a day nursery in that section."

HORSE SHOW IS ON NEXT WEEK

Final preparations are being made at the Park Riding School this afternoon for the annual Boston Horse Show, which will open at 8 o'clock on Monday evening and continue each evening during the week, with a matinee on Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock. The big show ring has been in the hands of the decorators all day and the final touches will be added on Monday, so that when the bugle calls for the first class the equine competitors will have a fitting setting for their paces.

For the opening programme seven classes have been arranged, beginning with class 33 for five-gaited saddle horses, with a nice entry. Class 7 will have fourteen single family horses in the ring, and there will be a scramble for the ribbons. T. W. Lawson has his Glorious Black Eagle, and his daughter, Mrs. J. F. Lord, has named Glorious Billy and Glorious Teddy. Robert S. Bradley has his Harvard and Yale. Miss E. P. Mason has her Gringo and Pride. C. W. Jewell has nominated four, H. L. Pierce the same number, while C. E. Jewell has in no less than six.

There is an even dozen in the class for thoroughbred saddle horses in Class 31, among the exhibitors being Mrs. Charles A. Munn, Miss Dorothy Mandell, Miss Elizabeth Kelly, Harrison Harwood, John P. Bowditch, Robert C. McQuillen, Miss Alice Thorndike, Mrs. J. F. Lord and Dr. P. J. Cronan.

Harness pairs in class 16 will be judged at 9:15, and there are fourteen entries. Much interest will centre in class 27, for saddle horses 14.3 and not exceeding 15.2 up to carrying 200 pounds. The class is small and select and will introduce J. C. Cook's Star Peavine. This six-year-old chestnut gelding stands 15¾ hands and comes from the blue grass of Kentucky.

He is by that sire of champions, Rex Peavine, and is half-brother to the two champion mares, Edna May and Diana of the Lea. The former was the five-gaited champion of the world, and the latter cost Colonel Lawrence Jones $5,000.

Class 18, harness tandems, will serve to introduce for the first time in Boston, Miss "Bunny" Lawson's Glorious Vanity Fair. This $6,000 equine beauty will be shown with Miss Lawson's Glorious Little Bonny. Vanity Fair's unbeaten record has not scared out other exhibitors, for eleven other tandems will be on the tan-bark.

Monday's programme will conclude with the hunters and jumpers in Class 50, the conditions of which call for the best performance over four obstacles, performance only to count. Nineteen of the best horses in New England are out for the ribbons in this event.

PREFERS HARVARD TO HONOR TRIP ABROAD

WORCESTER, April 22.—The National Association of Elocution Teachers has sent word to Leo H. Healy, the intercollegiate and interscholastic declaiming champion, that it wishes him to sail for England, April 27, to represent America in a contest with England's best declaimers of collegiate and scholastic rank, before the coronation. June 25 was the original date given Healy for his sailing. By that date he would have finished his senior year at the Classical High school, and would be a graduate. The new date means that Healy will be unable to graduate if he accepts. The chances for Healy getting back in time to go to Harvard in the Fall would be slim. So last night Healy sent a telegram to Buffalo stating that he is unwilling to go. His parents agree with him.

MISSION EXHIBIT OPENED BY TAFT

"The World in Boston" was opened this afternoon when President Taft, at the White House in Washington, pressed the button which set the missionary exposition going. The exposition will last until May 20 and will be the first of its kind ever held in the United States. It is given in the Mechanics Building and shows in the most practical way how foreign missions are conducted. It depicts scenes in the remote parts of the earth and presents the denizens of the Far East, the frontier West, Africa and other regions in native costumes.

The electric flash sent from Washington by President Taft turned on the lights in the Mechanics Building, and lighted a great star suspended over the platform in the main hall, and afterwards a message of congratulation came from the White House.

President Samuel B. Capen, LL. D., presided at the opening exercises, which were held in the main hall, and from 1 o'clock to 1:30 there were selections from the "Pageant of Darkness and Light," rendered by the Pageant Orchestra. During the next half hour the Pageant Choir sang in chorus. After a hymn, Rev. Dr. Cortland Myers, pastor of Tremont Temple, made the invocation. There was a reading from the Scriptures by Rev. Dr. A. Z. Conrad, pastor of the Park Street Church and next prayer by Bishop Willard F. Mallalieu of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Notable Men Present.

Other features of the program was the singing of the "Battle Hymn of the Republic" and "A Mighty Fortress Is Our God" before benediction was pronounced the Rev. Dr. F. A. Bisbee, editor of the Universalist Leader, a message from President Taft was read, and the Rt. Rev. William Lawrence, D. D., bishop of Eastern Massachusetts, and Dr. Booker T. Washington made addresses. The last feature of the afternoon program was the pressing of the button which opened the exposition by President Taft.

Many notable men and women were present at the opening. All of the State officials and legislators were invited to attend as well as the Mayor and City Council of Boston. Others on the list were college presidents and the officers of many missionary and religious bodies, school principals and teachers and a large number of other persons of standing, not only in this State, but in others.

In his address Bishop Lawrence said:

"The purpose of 'The World in Boston' is to give us in an objective form some suggestions of the great world movements, that of Christian Missions. We are not sending missionaires to other peoples against their will. We are sending them not first to overthrow their old faiths and destroy their idols and temples, we are not sending them to break up their finer traditions, whatever mistakes of this sort may have been made in the past.

World Gates Are Open.

"We are sending them because the gates of the world are now open to all influences, and the peoples of the world are glad to receive the privileges of civilization and education; as soon as they catch sight of the Christian civilization they turn and ask that they may have its privileges in hospital, school teaching and church, and thus we go not to destroy, but to fulfill, to build up, to take of the better elements and finer traditions of the people and incorporate them into the faith and life of Christ, and so build up a Christian church indigenous and of the people.

"Again, we will learn that, although much of the romance of missions is passed, the heroism is still there, and the same spirit of consecration. The work and conditions of the missionary to-day, whether as spiritual leader, teacher or physician, are much more commonplace than they used to be. The life of the officers at home is largely that of routine; the work, however, because of this, is the more effective.

"Consecration is occasionally revealed in the meeting of physical danger and death, but is far more frequently revealed in that power and devoted spirit which, cut off from home and socially isolated, is giving the very best of its life year in year out in behalf of God's children."

LE BLANC GIRL TELLS ASTONISHINC STORY IN GLOVER WILL CONTEST

tin of Clarendon street, St. John, was sworn in as her assistant.

To-night the party here, with the exception of Lawyers Barry and Elmore, will dine with Mrs. Charles Lawton of No. 54 Exmouth street, a friend of Detective Lawrence Smith of Boston, who is here with Lawyer Johnson.

Severe Ordeal for Girl.

Hattie did not retire until a late hour last night, after answering at least 500 questions. The taking of her deposition was begun at 3:30 in the afternoon, and she was first questioned by Edward F. Barry of counsel for the contestants.

She was questioned steadily until 6 o'clock, when an adjournment of an hour was taken for dinner. At 7 o'clock Hattie was again placed on the rack, and at 8 o'clock the girl was turned over to Samuel D. Elmore, counsel for Mrs. Lillian Glover, widow of the murdered man.

For three hours the little West Arichat girl was under the fire of Elmore's questions, which, it is reported, covered every detail of Hattie's life from the time she left her home on Isle Madame to come to Waltham to work in the Glover household and up to the murder of Glover. That the inquisition was merciless was indicated by Hattie's remark as she came out of the room, her face flushed and her bearing indicating almost utter exhaustion.

"Elmore is a brute," she exclaimed, as she hurried to her room.

But her ordeal was not over. She had hardly entered her room before Attorney Barry and the other inquisitors again were at her door, to ask a few more questions. It was almost 11 o'clock before the little Canadian girl was left alone to sink into the slumber of utter fatigue.

Johnson Advises Girl.

The day was an exhausting one for Hattie and all concerned in the taking of the deposition. John Kerr, King's Counsel, appointed by the Supreme Court of Massachusetts to act as commissioner in the taking of Hattie's deposition, first settled the question of a stenographer and interpreter. Mrs. Bertram Smith, official court stenographer here, was unable to act owing to a press of other business, and after a tilt between Mr. Barry and Mr. Elmore, Commissioner Kerr ruled that Miss Alice Morrell, a third cousin of Miss Le Blanc, and who was stenographer for Attorney Melvin M. Johnson, Hattie's counsel during the murder trial, was permitted to act in the same capacity at yesterday's hearing by Commissioner Kerr, although Elmore at first objected.

Mr. Johnson, who arrived here on the same train with the counsel in the case, was not permitted to be present at the hearing. Before it opened, however, he had a long conference with Hattie and her father and instructed the young girl as to her rights in the case as a witness and warned her to insist on their being recognized. Mr Johnson did not appear as counsel for Hattie at the hearing but remained close at hand when it was in progress to give her legal advice if necessary.

Surprise for Elmore.

That Hattie LeBlanc bore her long ordeal of yesterday remarkably well is the general verdict of those connected with the case. She is somewhat thinner than when she was in the East Cambridge court room on trial for the killing of Glover, but she looks healthier and her cheeks have regained the glow of youth that was missing then. She and her father arrived here from their home in West Arichat on Thursday morning and went to the Royal. Soon afterward they were joined by Lawrence F. Smith, whose interest in the case is apparent from the fact that he is a father-in-law of one of the Glover brothers, who are contesting the will. Miss Morrell, was with him. Mr. Smith at once took charge of Hattie and her father and arranged to keep them as far as possible from any publicity. All four ate in a corner of the hotel dining room and were not generally recognized. They did not register.

Attorney Elmore was not aware of Smith's presence here until he arrived with Messrs. Barry and Johnson and apparently the knowledge was not pleasing to him, although he made no comment publicly on the interest Mr. Smith is showing in the case.

Hattie to Return Home.

It will be late this afternoon before Hattie Le Blanc will be released from the witness stand. The attorneys, Miss Morrell and Mr. Smith leave this evening for Boston. Hattie and her father will go to their home in West Arichat.

Last night after Hattie had been permitted to retire, Mr. Barry said:

"I do not mind saying that Hattie Le Blanc made an excellent witness, and she answered every question that I asked her willingly and with intelligence. This is the first time that she has told her story direct to a court and it cannot be divulged until read at the trial at East Cambridge on Monday.

At a conference at the close of the afternoon sitting we decided to have a night session and to continue all night if necessary in order to complete the hearing in time for us to leave St. John Saturday evening.

"I recognize the right of Mr. Johnson to come to St. John and advise his client, and, moreover, think it very chivalrous of him to take such care for the protection of the friendless girl. To me she is only a child, just beginning to blossom into womanhood. She is quite contented at her native home at West Arichat and expresses no desire to return to Massachusetts."

Deposition Is Long.

The girl's testimony at the night session was highly important, it was declared. A mass of evidence was adduced.

"No one can break Hattie Le Blanc down in her story," was the comment of M. M. Johnson when told Elmore had occupied three hours of the night session in the cross-examination of the girl. "There is one reason," he added, "and that is because she tells the truth."

Mr. Barry went for a walk with Mr. Johnson at midnight in a snowstorm and seemed to be on friendly terms with Hattie's counsel. It was noticeable that during recesses Mr. Barry was talking to the girl in the corridors, being able to converse with her in the French tongue.

The mass of evidence was so great that one of the hotel stenographers was sworn in and spent most of the night assisting Miss Morrell in transcribing her notes.

It is hardly probable that the deposition will be ready for Commissioner Kerr to sign before Monday.

Marvel For Any Superfluous Hair

Wonderful Action of Elec-tro-la, The New Hair-Remover, Will Surprise You.

Nearly every man or woman who has been troubled with superfluous or undesirable hairs has had experience with various preparations which merely burn off the surface hair, redden the skin, and fail to kill the hair roots.

Elec-tro-la is the remarkable new hair-remover which does more than merely kill the surface hair.

It goes to the hair roots, destroys them absolutely and forever.

Besides this Elec-tro-la, instead of burning or reddening the skin as other hair-removers do, leaves the skin fresh and soft, so nobody can ever tell you have been using anything. Whether the superfluous hair is of light or heavy growth, Elec-tro-la will destroy it immediately and permanently.

Even light fuzz makes a woman look coarse. Heavy growth is humiliating, and is Cupid's worst enemy.

Make your face, arms, hands, shoulders, neck and bust look clean and exquisite by using Elec-tro-la.

The regular price is 1.00 a bottle. Your money refunded if you are not satisfied.

Just send coupon below, with name and address, together with 2c stamp to pay for postage, for a free trial package of Elec-tro-la to prove what it will do.

FEZ CAPTURED; SULTAN FLEES

MADRID, April 22.—A telegram from Tetuan says that a native has reached there and declared that the Moroccan rebels have stormed Fez and massacred the garrison, and that the Sultan has taken refuge in the French consulate.

There is no confirmation of the report obtainable here.

A later dispatch from Tangier, Morocco, says a relief expedition set out for Fez to-day. It consists of 2,000 Moorish troops commanded by French officers.

Fear for Europeans.

LONDON, April 22.—The gravest anxiety is felt as to the safety of the European residents of Fez, the capital of Morocco, which for weeks past has been besieged by tribesmen in rebellion against the Sultan Mulai Hafid.

The distance from Fez to Tangier can usually be covered in three days, but no news has been received at the coast from the capital for eight days past, and the last reports were that the plight of the Sultan and the city was desperate.

The Sultan's army of 2,500 men, under command of the French colonel, Bremond, is according to the latest news, in a pitiable and helpless condition at a point twenty-five miles northwest of Fez, where it is being harassed in the rear by the rebel Sheradas.

PRINCE HENRY IN AERO PERIL

DARMSTADT, Germany, April 22.—Prince Henry of Prussia had a thrilling experience while flying in an aeroplane with August Euler over the military parade ground to-day. The aviators were sailing along at a good clip, having made thirty-four miles in a circular course in forty minutes, when a cylinder in the machine broke and compelled the Prince, who was operating the aeroplane, to make a hasty descent, which, however, was accomplished successfully. There was not time in which to choose a landing place, and the aviators came down in the midst of a drilling regiment of soldiers, who had to scatter quickly in order to avoid injury. The Prince has become an enthusiastic aviator, and was congratulated upon his presence of mind and exhibition of nerve in the emergency.

FIREBUG PLOT IS CHARGED

the big lumber yards. It is surrounded by wooden structures, which might have been the original of a conflagration had the plans of the firebugs worked out.

The house is owned by David Pearlstein, 41 years old, of No. 148 Williams street, Chelsea, who is also under arrest. He was brought before Jersky and Garfingle after they had made their confessions. Captain McBride told him of his rights and asked him if he had anything to say.

"I deny all there men have said," said Pearlstein. I knew nothing of the attempt to fire the house."

He refused to make any further statement.

When the firebugs were at work there were four adults and six children asleep in the building. There was $7,000 insurance on the building.

Noise Saves Family.

Only the fact that Harry Finkelstein, who lives on the second floor, was awakened by a suspicious noise on the roof late at night saved him and others from destruction. He went to the roof but saw nobody. But he was alarmed and to ease his mind went to the street and called in Patrolmen Davis and McMahon, telling them of his suspicions. The policemen made a search of the roof and of the unoccupied portions of the house but discovered no one.

The officers left the house, but the head of the family had barely fallen asleep again before he was once more awakened by a noise. This time he rushed out and again told the policemen, who had not gone far away. The officers made another search, and this time discovered a man on the roof. He told them he lived in Boston, and said he had fled to the house, thinking it unoccupied, from the violence of a gang of young men and boys who had pursued him because of his race. He had been stoned and beaten, he said.

The man was shivering, apparently with fear, and the policemen let him go, after taking his name and address.

Plot Is Discovered.

It was only a few moments afterward that the same policemen were called to the house for the third time. The suspicious noises had been heard again. This time the policemen discovered that the noise had been caused by a man falling through the skylight, but he had made his escape before they arrived.

In their search for him the patrolmen came upon evidences of the fire plot. On the upper and lower floors of the building they discovered trails of kerosene and gasoline while piles of oil soaked rags and papers and refuse were piled against the partitions. On the roof was a coil of oil soaked rope.

Davis and McMahon reported the case to their station and word was sent to the Boston police to arrest the man who had been released after being found on the roof. He was discovered at the address given to the Cambridge policemen and turned over to them.

Pearlstein Is Contractor.

Pearlstein is well known in Chelsea. He was engaged in business there as a building contractor. In 1910 he was fined $20 for violating the city ordinances by keeping building material in the street. Patrolman Gaffney arrested him and testified against him in court. Gaffney declared he had spoken to Pearlstein several times and that the latter had said he didn't care for the police for he could buy the clerk of courts, the judge and all the police officials he wanted. The case was appealed and Pearlstein paid a fine of $10 in the Superior Court after pleading guilty.

HOLYOKE MAN LOSES "BABY"

SPRINGFIELD, April 22.—The five years of matrimonial muddles suffered by Thomas M. Cleary, a wholesale liquor dealer of Holyoke and wealthy, came to an end yesterday when Mr. Cleary was granted a divorce from Lucy A. Cleary. Before obtaining his decree Cleary had appeared against his wife in court three times—twice as defendant and once as plaintiff.

Mr. Cleary is fifty-five years old. His divorced wife is almost thirty years his junior. Their courtship was a stormy one. It began way back in 1899 at Holyoke, when Mrs. Cleary, then Miss Warren, was a schoolgirl of sixteen. He was just amassing his fortune. In spite of her tender years, Mr. Cleary proposed marriage at that time—so Mrs. Cleary testified in one of the three actions—even setting the wedding date a year later.

She demurred on the ground that she did not know her own mind. In 1906 she went to New York, stopping at No. 502 West One Hundred and Thirty-sixth street. Mr. Cleary followed her to New York, sought her for weeks, and finally met her by chance as he was leaving a Broadway theatre. He proposed on the spot. She accepted. All went well until one night she espied a younger male friend and left her elderly flame to speak to the young man. Cleary in a huff fled back to Holyoke.

Then Miss Warren brought suit for $25,000 breach of promise in the New York courts. She presented a stack of letters in evidence, which contained such endearing terms as "Little Fiddlesticks" and "My Beautiful Baby." The suit was quashed when Mr. Cleary hastened from Holyoke and married the girl.

For a year they lived peacefully in Holyoke. One day Mrs. Cleary packed her duds and "returned to mother." Shortly after she began suit for a limited divorce and separate support. She set forth that Cleary was no proper husband for a girl-wife.

In return Mr. Cleary began his suit for divorce.

CIRCUS MEN DINE ON EDUCATED PORKER

CINCINNATI, April 22.—Reuben, an educated pig and pride of the John Robinson circus, is dead. To be sure a pig still follows Hal Newport, the clown, into the ring, but it is not Reuben. "I liked that pig," said Newport, "He could do everything but talk. He could spell out his name with blocks. I brought him up myself on a feeding bottle. He was worth $1,000. We were all eating our heads off when the property man rushed in and cried that Reuben had got mixed up with those pigs that were sent from the stock yards. 'Was one of those pigs a white one with black polka dots?' I asked. 'It was,' he stammered. 'Then,' I cried, 'we have eaten Reuben.'"

TEN HEROINES PUT OUT FIRE

FITCHBURG, April 22.—Miss Mabel Smith, a high school girl, led a force of nine women as fire fighters to-day and put out a grass fire in the rear of the four-story tenement block No. 176 to 182 Summer street. Boys are believed to have set the grass afire and fled.

Miss Smith was the first to see the flames. She called to the other women in the block, the men all being at work, and with them as a bucket brigade fought the flames for nearly half an hour until the fire department was summoned.

Miss Smith herself prevented the flames from catching on a barn adjoining the tenement. She and the other women worked with brooms and shovels while some brought water in buckets from their homes. The flames scorched the tenement and burned the clapboards on the barn. Some of the women who helped Miss Smith were Mrs. B. G. Averill, Mrs. Henry Burnap and Mrs. John Goddard.

WEALTHY MAN DEAD IN FIRE, WOMAN DYING

PARKERSBURG, W. Va., April 22.—W. E. Curry, a wealthy chair manufacturer of this city, is dead, and Mrs. W. E. Caskey, wife of the proprietor of a fashionable restaurant here, is dying of burns sustained in a fire in the Caskey apartments early to-day. Firemen stumbled over the body of Currie. In another room they discovered Mrs. Caskey, nearly dead from burns. On Curry's head was a terrible wound made apparently by some sharp steel instrument. William Caskey, aged twenty-one, a son of the injured woman discovered the fire.

WASH THOSE PIMPLES OFF

Use D. D. D., that mild, soothing wash, that recognized remedy for Eczema and all skin troubles. First drops take away that awful burning itch, cleanse the skin—wash away every pimple—every impurity. Nothing like D. D. D. for the complexion.

Get a 25c trial bottle to-day—worth ten times its cost to have a bottle in the house. At any rate, drop into our store to talk over the merits of this wonderful prescription.

Pays For Itself In Two Weeks

Workman's Lunch Kit, $3 Complete, consisting of a $1 Thermos combination pocket size and ice-box bottle, a large two-compartment, rust-proof lunch box and suit case, measuring 10 in. by 10 in. by 3½ in. deep as illustrated.

Live Agents wanted to introduce this new Thermos Lunch Kit to business men and industrial workers. Write for particulars.

Think of the change it will make every day of your life in the cold winter months to have four large cups of piping hot home-made coffee, tea or soup right in your lunch kit, ready for you, when you are ready for it, or in the hot summer months, ice cold tea, coffee, milk, lemonade or anything else.

Think of the comfort, convenience and economy this lunch kit will give you wherever you go—whatever you do. At night it is ideal in the house, for the baby, the wife or the aged mother in serving them hot or cold refreshments as needed, and don't forget it on your hunting, fishing and vacation trips.

Contrast the handsome appearance of this suit case with the old style dinner pail. If you are buying the meals you take away from home, it will save you $3 every two weeks.

See one at the nearest Thermos dealer's and you will buy one on sight. If he will not supply you, write to us direct, and we will see that you get it. Thermos bottles, pints $1 up; quarts, $2 up. Please be cautious, as there are worthless imitations: look for the name THERMOS stamped plainly on the bottom, and be sure you see it.

FREE: We will send you our 24-page booklet, on request, illustrating and describing all Thermos uses and articles.

TRADE BILL IS SENT TO SENATE

WASHINGTON, April 22.—Canadian reciprocity is now up to the Senate. The Underwood bill, which the House passed last night by the overwhelming vote of 226 to 89, goes to the Senate to-day and will be presented on Monday. That the bill will pass the Senate is considered certain, though it will not go through the upper House with the speed with which it was shot through the lower body.

There may be, probably will be, prolonged debate on the measure in the Senate, and the Old Guard will die hard in trying to defeat the bill, but everybody who follows congressional legislation closely believes that the efforts of the middle-of-the-road standpatters will be futile in the end. The bill is expected to pass, receive the President's signature and become a part of the international code of the United States.

Practically all of the Democrats with the exception, perhaps, of Senators Bailey and Bankhead and a few other dyed-in-the-wool obstructionists, backed by the lumber interests and other big business men, will support the bill. The lumber interests and a few Senators representing Middle West farming constituents will fight the measure tooth and nail. The progressives, the Democrats and a majority of the Republicans will back the Underwood measure and, with a handsome majority when it comes to the vote, expect to swing it to victory.

There will be strenuous objections and long-winded speeches against the bill by certain Senators, some of them talking only for public consumption, for even those Senators who are now talking loudest against reciprocity admit that the Canadian agreement is certain to be carried through.

Most startling in their nature were revelations made by Chairman Oscar Underwood of the Ways and Means Committee of plans adopted by great trusts, monopolies and interests to defeat the reciprocity bill. That fight is still on and will have to be met in the Senate. They include missionary work and misleading telegrams to members of the House by the American Protective Tariff League, closing of mills by the Steel Trust and throwing workmen out of employment to influence Representatives and Senators and the systematic campaign by the Lumber Trust under the control of Edward Hines of Chicago of Lorimer bribery scandal fame.

Mr. Underwood, in his closing address, read from the New York AMERICAN the exposure of the Wakeman telegrams to members of the House from the league's headquarters in New York. In this connection it is illuminating to note that of the nineteen Representatives against whom Wilbur F. Wakeman's Protective Tariff League levelled its trust guns just two voted against reciprocity. These members were Powers of Kentucky and Driscoll of New York.

EVA TANGUAY, WHO PAYS $540 FOR A JAB WITH HATPIN

EVA TANGUAY DOES CARE NOW

LOUISVILLE, Ky., April 22.—For the first time in her stage career, Eva Tanguay did not say, "I don't care." It has cost the "Sambo girl" $540, besides lawyers' bills, to jab a hatpin into Clarence Hess, a stage hand at Macauley's Theatre. Hess got into the actress' way during her engagement here a year ago and was jabbed for his awkwardness and then knocked downstairs by a blow from Eva's fist. She was fined $40 in the police court at the time and a damage suit resulted.

TAX EXPERTS TO ASSIST FOSS

Governor Foss, through his secretary Dudley Holman, has issued a statement relative to tax dodging. In it he reviews the conferences held by him during the week and declares that he has found that the opposition to changes in the tax laws comes from those who benefit under the present ineffective statutes. In the statement he says:

> The conferences held by the Governor this week on the question of taxation have brought to his office much information upon the subject, and the tax commissioner's department is engaged in preparing for him a full report upon the subject of the enforcement or nonenforcement of the existing laws by local assessors. No evidence has yet come to the office to indicate that anybody is satisfied with the conditions that now exist, except perhaps a few people who believe that they profit by them.

Will Talk With Experts.

On next Saturday it is expected that Hon. William H. Corbin, tax commissioner of Connecticut, will visit Boston to confer with Governor Foss about his investigations, and it is hoped that Judge E. E. Woodbury, chairman of the New York State Board of Tax Commissioners, will be present at the same time.

On Wednesday Governor Foss is to visit Worcester to make an address before the State Board of Trade, and expects in that address to consider taxation among other questions.

In seeking information about the character of the opposition to changes heretofore proposed in our tax laws, the Governor is more and more confirmed in the opinion that the opposition has come largely from persons who have been evading taxation under the present laws, or from persons who believe that they have derived pecuniary profit from the abuses of the present system.

In this connection he finds that the claim has been made that our present tax laws artificially increase mortgage investments upon choice properties in the heart of the business district of Boston; and it has been claimed that in this way the rate of interest has been depressed one-half of one per cent. Exact evidence is hard to secure, either in support or in disproof of this argument. Governor Foss believes, however, that here, as in most cases where artificial markets have been created, the benefit to certain favored classes is more fanciful than real; but he is unable to see why in any case there should be such favored classes.

Equality for All.

He believes that depositors in savings banks are entitled to the full natural rate of interest, consistent with the absolute safety of their deposits. He does not understand why depositors living in the South End, in South Boston, in the North End, in the West End, in Charlestown or East Boston, should receive one-half of 1 per cent. less than the natural rate of interest, in order to further real estate operations in the business and financial district. Since he believes that depositors are entitled to receive the full natural rate of interest he considers it inconsistent with common fairness that the conditions alleged to exist should be allowed to continue.

CAMBRIDGE GIRL MISSING FROM HOME

Mary E. Hill, the sixteen-year-old daughter of Mrs. Mary Hill of No. 361 Allston street, Cambridge, left her home Monday morning and has not returned. Her mother is at a loss to understand her strange disappearance. She was seen in Watertown Thursday, but the police of that town have not as yet ascertained that she is living there. The girl is five feet two inches in height, has brown hair and weighs about 135.

NEW SIGNS FOR SURFACE CARS

A radical improvement in the signs on the surface cars of the Elevated is under consideration, as the result of the efforts of the Retail Trade Board of the Boston Chamber of Commerce and the Efficiency Committee of the Elevated. It is proposed to do away entirely with all the signs which now appear on the cars and substitute new ones of the same length, but between one and one-half and two feet high, black and white, which at night will be illuminated by an electric light showing through from behind, so that a person a block away can tell what the route of the car is.

A particular feature of the plan is the discontinuance of the present circular signs bearing division numbers, such as "6," "9," etc., recently installed, which have had the effect of mystifying the public as to where the cars are going. For the present signs are of no use as a guide, inasmuch as cars marked "9," for instance, although running on the Newton division, go by several different routes.

Under the new plan the number will denote not only the division, but also the route. The division numbers will be followed by numbers indicating the exact route, so that cars on the Newton division, instead of being all numbered "9," will be numbered 910, 911, 912, 913, etc., according to the route.

The number will appear on the left side of the sign, and on the right will be the wording, which at present appears on the long, narrow side signs.

The Retail Trade Board, the United Improvement Association and others have been asked to make inspection of the car. [illegible], as the representative of the Retail Trade Board of the Chamber, has been active in trying to bring about an improvement in the signs.

GOOD THINGS TO EAT

Strawberries are getting to a point where the proletariat has visions of a shortcake on the family table. Excellent berries are being sold for twenty-five cents a box, and the indications are that they will be obtained next week for twenty cents.

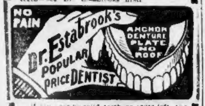
Apples are scarce and high. There are many thousand barrels in storage in the big refrigerating plants about Boston, but the demand is so strong that those who hold them are advancing the price week by week. Very nubby russets sell for $5.50 and $6 a barrel at wholesale and two for a nickel on the fruit stands. Good baldwins sell as high as $7 and $7.50 a barrel at wholesale.

Butter is going to be higher say the Boston dealers. The cold weather has held back the pasture lands and "grass butter" is going to be late in arriving. At present the best butter sells for twenty-four cents at wholesale, whether it is from the New England or the Western creameries. This is considered low for the season, but those who are best acquainted with the market conditions say that the price is liable to advance sharply at any moment.

Those who hold State of Maine potatoes still are reaping big profits from their holdings. The price—wholesale—has advanced from forty-five cents a bushel to seventy-five cents during the past fortnight and is still advancing. Florida new potatoes sell for $5.50 and $6 a barrel.

No More FalseTeeth

Dr. Estabrooks can, at popular prices, replace the lost teeth by the use of his well-known Alveolar system of dentistry without the use of an old-style plate or old-style crowns or bridges. Don't let any dentist extract your teeth or make you a set of false teeth—see Dr. Estabrooks first.



If you have no solid teeth or roots left, the Anchor Denture Plate is the best for you. Unlike the ordinary set of teeth, Dr. Estabrooks' Anchor Denture Plate is roofless. This construction allows you to talk and taste perfectly. It is cool, comfortable, clean and fits better. It never drops, shifts or dislodges to cause wearer embarrassment.

"CAPT. CREIGHTON," WHO FLED BOSTON AS A DEFAULTER

OSCAR M. WHEELOCK

This is Oscar Creighton, soldier of fortune, who since his death recently has been positively identified as Oscar M. Wheelock, absconding auditor of the Massachusetts Bonding and Insurance Company of Boston. Since the Mexican revolution has been in progress Creighton had been known as one of the most daring of the rebel leaders.

Two days ago photographs of the dead soldier were published and immediately recognized as those of Wheelock. He was at one time a chess and billiard expert here. After his flight from this city it was discovered that he had embezzled $10,000 from the bonding company.

As Captain Creighton, soldier of fortune, Wheelock during the past three months gained widespread fame on the Mexican border as a dare-devil rebel leader. His forte was the dynamiting of roadways and bridges, and he was marked as an extremely bold and dangerous man by the United States troops guarding the border. In a foolhardy attack against the Federals he was shot down.

ALLEGE DUNBURG ONE OF BANDITS

Following a confession that he carried a revolver and lived in Cambridge at the time of the "shooting up" in Forest Hills, nearly three years ago, police inspectors are trying to connect John Kriss Dunburg, alias J. K. Schilger, with that case. Dunburg is held in $10,000 bonds for the alleged blackmailing of Daniel Waldo Field, the wealthy Brockton shoe manufacturer. Anthony B. Yorken, a Brockton tailor, who is held with Dunburg on the blackmailing charge, confessed to the police his part in the alleged blackmailing scheme and charged that Dunburg was one of the Forest Hills bandits. Both men are held for a further hearing on April 26. Meanwhile the police will investigate their careers and the charges against them.

Dunburg, who is a Lett, about twenty-four years old, denied to the police that he was connected with the Lett yeggmen in the battle at Forest Hills. He admitted to the police that he always carried a revolver.

Detectives have learned from Dunburg's acquaintances in Brockton that he has acted queerly for some time and had said that he expected to receive a large sum of money within a few weeks.

"NIGHT LETTER" BY CABLE SOON

Theodore N. Vail, president of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, is in London trying to affect a combination of cable companies that will permit the establishment of "night letters" by cable, his friends here learned in dispatches from England to-day.

An agreement between the Western Union, Anglo-American and Direct United States Cable Companies will probably be completed within the next few days.

The agreement will not mean amalgamation, but rather a community of interests. The object is stated to be not to create a monopoly, but to provide increased facilities on both sides of the Atlantic, and particularly in the inauguration of the "night letter" plain.

The Anglo-American and the Direct Companies, which are British corporations, will each retain its individuality so far as the present holding is concerned, but they will to a certain extent pass under American control.

Mr. Vail, who is well known here, removed his executive officers to New York several years ago.

City Hall Notes

Thomas A. English has been appointed a dairy inspector in the health department at $1,200 per year, Edward W. Roomer, an inspector in the building department at $1,600 per year, and Frank P. Sheehan, an inspector of roofing for the school house department at $1,200 per year.

The statue of Edward Everett now in the Public garden will be moved to Edward Everett Square, Dorchester, at once, the mayor having approved the contract for the removal of the same. It will cost $473 to do the work.

The question as to how the city shall dispose of its refuse will be opened up again on Monday when Commissioner Rourke of the Public Works Department opens bids for the work. Only one bid was received on previous advertisements for this contract but Commissioner Rourke is hopeful that competition will be secured on the present invitation.

As evidence of the fact that competitive bidding secures low prices for the city even in contract work, two awards made the past week by the Public Works Department will show. The successful bidder in the first case secured the work for $1,096.05 where the department engineers had figured $1,526.50 as a fair price for the work. In the other instance the lowest bid was [illegible] while the department estimate was $1,602.50.

TO WOMEN WHO DREAD MOTHERHOOD
Healthy, Happy Children BORN WITHOUT PAIN

The wretchedness and sorrow of childless parents and the dread of the pains of childbirth, which is so often deterrent, can all be done away. Dr. J. H. Dye's system positively cures sterility and assures easy and absolutely painless childbirth. Thousands of happy parents and grateful women testify to the wonderful success of Dr. Dye's treatment. WHAT IS BEST TRAIT IN WOMAN?

CASH PRIZES IN WOMAN CONTEST

"What is the most excellent trait in woman?"

Write your answer to Eleanor Ames, the AMERICAN, No. 80 Summer Street, Boston, Mass.

The best letter wins a cash prize of $10, the next best $5, and there are $1 prizes for the five next best letters.

By ELEANOR AMES.

To-day I am able to give my friends some results of my new contest:

What is the most excellent quality in woman?

By the thousands the replies have come in to my desk. And what quality do you think leads in popularity? It is goodness. This trait is given by hundreds as the one quality in woman which stands out above all others.

The ten most popular traits among the replies so far tabulated in the order of their popularity are as follows:

Goodness.
Charity.
Common sense.
Love.
Maternal devotion.
Truthfulness.
Tact.
Patience.
Modesty.
Kindness.

Some of the other most popular qualities are unselfishness, womanliness, cheerfulness, thoughtfulness, gentleness, endurance, faithfulness, congeniality, affection, loyalty, thrift, discretion, sympathy, fidelity, companionableness, fortitude, poise, affability, refinement, adaptability, courage, prudence, reserve, winsomeness, thriftiness, individuality, charm, politeness.

Now, of course, the number of writers who favor the same trait, that is, its popularity, has nothing to do with the winning the prizes, but it is interesting, I think. Don't you?

What I want is your opinion of what is woman's most excellent quality, and a brief letter from you as to why you think the quality you give is the most excellent trait.

For the best letter, the prize is Ten Dollars in cash.

For the second best letter, the prize is Five Dollars.

For the next five best letters there are One Dollar prizes each.

Write plainly, on one side of the paper, only. Address letters to ELEANOR AMES, AMERICAN, No. 80 Summer street, Boston, Mass.

Here are a few letters I received to-day:

Charity Is the Greatest.

As we go through life, we are impressed with the different traits of women; but that which stands out pre-eminently as the most desirable is Charity. Not merely charity that gives financial aid to the needy, but the universal love and charity of thought, word and action, that keeps a woman true and merciful under the most trying circumstances. A charity like this radiates a wonderful influence, and womanhood, possessed of this attribute, has attained to the highest nobility, for of the three great virtues—Faith, Hope and Charity—Charity is the greatest of them all.

AGNES M. GOULD, No. 529 Broadway, Malden.

Champions Womanliness.

Womanliness is the most excellent quality in woman. According to Webster, who says in the cold concise dictionary way: "Womanliness—Becoming a woman-effeminate." Translated in full it must mean that a woman's most excellent quality is a—Graceful-mother-heart-wisdom and a dash of attractiveness which is womanliness, the most excellent quality in woman.

GEORGE W. REINHARDT, No 224 West Elm street, Brockton.

Goodness Rules World.

"Goodness" is not only the best quality in a woman but it covers everything. A woman does not have to be beautiful or intelligent; married or single. The atmosphere of a good woman fills the air. One can feel its influence. Even little children love to be in her presence without being able to tell what the attraction is.

A good woman has a heart that is filled with kindness. Her influence is unbounded and her deeds are unnumbered. She seeks neither thanks nor notoriety. Her reward is her own knowledge that she has accomplished some less favored mortal. She does not even think of the crown that awaits her in heaven. This grand earth of ours may be run by men, but surely it is ruled by good women.

A "BALTIMORE" GIRL.

Tact Means Success.

It seems to me that tact is the most excellent quality in woman. A woman who possesses that quality will usually be found to also have kindness of heart, godness, general benevolence and many other desirable attributes. A woman may be beautiful in face and form, speech and manner, but if she lacks tact she will be less of a success than a plainer woman who possesses it.

UNION MUST PAY STRIKE VICTIM

For ordering what the Court holds an illegal and unjustifiable strike by means of which Mariano De Minico lost his job, the Granite Cutters' International Association of America will have to pay him $500 damages and costs of $207.21 according to a decree signed by Judge Morton of the Supreme Court.

De Minico was foreman of the Wells Brothers' stone quarry at Hopkinton. A strike occurred at the quarry on June 22, 1909, because De Minico and another foreman enforced a rule of the firm. The workmen returned to work two days afterwards after making an agreement with the firm. A few days afterwards De Minico was discharged as foreman, but continued to work as a journeyman.

The master to whom the case was referred found that De Minico was a satisfactory foreman and would not have been removed but for the strike. He also reported that the strike was instigated by a few men to obtain De Minico's removal.

The full bench of the Supreme Court held that because some of the workmen had a personal objection to the foreman it did not furnish a lawful justification for a strike.

LULU GLASER ASKS DIVORCE FROM HERZ

NEW YORK, April 22.—Ralph Herz, has been served at his home in the Hotel Hermitage with papers in a divorce action brough by Lulu Glaser the actress.

Herz is the star in the new play "Doctor De Luxe," at the Knickerbocker Theatre. He admitted to-day that he had received the papers, but would not discuss the matter other than to say that he would display a generous spirit in the matter.

Rumors of trouble between the couple have been circulated for some time. Recently Herz was playing in "Madame Sherry" and on one occasion when he was absent from a matinee it was learned he was besieging his wife's dressing room. Later, it was said that he made other unsuccessful efforts to see his wife and failed.

REDMOND TO AID THE WELSH PARTY

LONDON, April 22.—John Redmond, leader of the Irish party in Parliament, and Ellis Griffith, chairman of the Welsh party, spoke from the same platform at Holyhead, voicing complete harmony and co-operation for securing Irish home rule and disestablishment of the Church of Wales. Mr. Redmond also promised Irish assistance for whatever measure of self-government the Welsh and Scotch people desired for themselves.

SPANKING CAUSES TROUBLE IN Y. M. C. A.

MIDDLETOWN, Ct., April 22.—Spanking the son of William H. Spear, a bank director, because he refused to leave a bath tub in which he had been splashing over half an hour at the Y. M. C. A., may cost the job of William H. Erfling, physical director of the association. Mr. Spear is a director of the Y. M. C. A., and has demanded that Erfling be dismissed.

JOYCE EMPLOYES DANCE.

The annual dancing party given by members of the Joyce Bros. & Co. Benevolent Society was one of the most enjoyable of the season, and the attendance at Catholic Union Hall was the largest which has yet graced any entertainment by this organization. Amos A. McArthur was floor director with James P. Dunn as assistant. Augustus J. Brewster was first marshal and Miss Mary P. Murphy second marshal. Edward W. Joyce was chief of aids.

BOOM WORK FOR NEW ENGLAND

Plans for the active operation of the joint New England Industrial Bureau of the Boston & Maine and New Haven roads, the scope of which, as partially outlined by President Charles S. Mellen of these lines, has been given in the AMERICAN, are taking concrete form. Within a few days the Boston headquarters of the bureau will be opened in the South Terminal building with William H. Seeley in permanent charge. Second Vice-President Campbell of the New Haven will be actively interested in the work of the bureau and will have a general oversight of its operation. The idea it to boom the industrial and commercial resources of all the New England States, and especially to put Boston to the front as the leading port of the Atlantic seaboard.

President Mellen's plans include the booming of New England as the most advantageous location in the country for new industrial and commercial enterprises and also to galvanize into new life industries that for one reason or another have fallen behind in the industrial race. Co-operation between the Mellen lines and the boards of trade all though New England is to be an important factor in the work. Advantages of New England will be spread broadcast over this country and in Europe.

The bureau will act as a clearing house for the boards of trade in all the New England cities and towns. Its representatives will travel through the different sections and study the existing conditions, making exhaustive reports to their department. When evils are found to exist which are resulting in the detriment of a city or town's development steps will be taken to rectify them though the co-operation of the department and the town or city in question.

Bureaus are now maintained in Augusta, Me., and Concord, N. H., and it is the ultimate intention to open branch offices in many sections of New England. Inquiries of all sorts will be answered by the department and it will be possible to obtain from it detailed information in regard to industrial conditions.

For 20 Days More to Readers of This Paper
New EXCELSIOR Telescope and Solar Eye Piece
All for $1

Here's a bargain. Telescopes with solar eyepiece attachment have previously cost $8 to $10. We bought the stock of a large European manufacturer and thus are enabled to sell this outfit for $1. Think of it—the solar eye piece alone is worth more than that! You can see the sun spots as they appear, and inspect solar eclipses.

The Excelsior Telescope has a multiplicity of uses—its pleasure is never dimmed—each day discovers some new delight. Distinguish faces blocks away. Read far distant signs. Use it in cases of emergency.

Take the Excelsior Telescope with you on pleasure and vacation trips and you can take in all the scenery at a glance—ships miles out; mountains encircled by vapors; bathers in the surf; tourists climbing up the winding paths.

Used as a Microscope, microbes and germs in plants, seeds, etc., may be discovered.

For certain classes of outdoor workers the Excelsior Telescope is a positive necessity. Who knows but that some time it may prove a source of aid to repay its cost many times?

The Excelsior Telescope is mechanically correct—bound in brass, brass safety cap to exclude dust. Powerful lenses, scientifically ground and adjusted. Handy to carry—will go in pocket when closed, but when opened is

Over 3½ Feet Long

Circumference 5¾ inches. Heretofore telescopes of this size have sold for $5 to $8.

F. S. Patton, Arkansas City, Kansas, writes: "Can count cattle nearly twenty miles, can see large ranch seventeen miles east, and can tell colors and count windows in house."

L. S. Henry, The Saxon, New York, writes: "Your solar eye piece is great. I witnessed eclipse at Austrian Tyrol when sun was almost 40 per cent concealed."

Price $1. By Mail Insured $1.20

This bargain is for 30 days more, 20 days have elapsed and thousands have bought one. Buy now for summer vacation. Buy it to give as present next Christmas. It's worth it. You may never have this opportunity again. Send money in registered letter, post-office order or bank draft payable to our order. Absolute guarantee of satisfaction or money refunded. Do it NOW.

Our new catalogue of goods is sent with each order.

DISCOVERED REMEDY FOR ASTHMA

A Kansas Chemist Discovered a Simple Home Remedy for Asthma and Makes a Generous Offer.

Dr. D. J. Lane, a chemist located at 327 Lane Bldg., St. Marys, Kans., has discovered a simple remedy for Asthma. To test it, he sent some to people who had been suffering from Asthma for forty years, and to their delight they were easily cured. Mr. Lane is so proud of his discovery and has so much confidence in its ability to cure that he will send a $1.00 bottle by express to anyone who will write him for it. His offer is that he is to be paid for it if it cures, the one taking it is to be the judge and report its effect within ten days after receipt of the cure.

If you suffer from Asthma, write for a bottle at once. Send no money. Your name and address on a postal card will do.

TAFT DEFEATS FOES IN PARTY

WASHINGTON, April 22.—Believing that he has scored the first victory against foes attempting to defeat him for the Republican presidential nomination in 1912, President Taft is happy to-day over the defeat of the La Follette resolution in the committee of committees yesterday. The President's friends understand that the resolution was aimed to secure recognition for an organized third party in the Senate and to several of his advisers the President has expressed his gratification over the decisive vote of 7 to 4 which balked the first move in the progressive campaign.

If there was any tendency on the part of the regulars to agree to the insurgent plan it was promptly checked when it was learned that President Taft resented the insurgent attitude in opposing policies recommended by him and their activity, which is construed to mean opposition to his renomination in 1912. Organization and insurgent Republicans in the Senate apparently are in a hopeless deadlock. Until some compromise is reached the Senate committees will not be filled for some time and legislation will be held back

SCHOONER GRAY IS OFF SHOAL

PROVINCETOWN, April 22.—After half of her cargo of paving stones had been hove over the side, the Rockland, Me., schooner Caroline Gray, which grounded on Wood End bar Thursday, was hauled into deep water on the morning tide to-day by the tug Neponset and towed into the harbor, apparently uninjured.

The Gray had an easy berth under the finger of the cape, well protected from the fury of the easterly gale which was still howling outside at dawn to-day. Once in a while a big roller would surge round Race Point, and rushing down Wood End would give the Gray a bump, but these were infrequent, and the Neponset had no difficulty in running a line to her.

The Wood End life savers, who had helped the crew of the Gray jettison several hundred granite paving stones yesterday, assisted the tug, while the revenue cutter Gresham hovered in the offing ready to send an additional line, in case the tug failed.

POSSE ON TRAIL AFTER SHOOTING

MIDDLEBORO, April 22.—Chief of Police Swift is at the head of a posse of policemen and volunteers that is searching for Manuel Gonsalves, who is accused of shooting Joseph Santos last night in a camp of cranberry bog builders at East Middleboro. Santos is reported to be dangerously wounded. He is in a New Bedford hospital. He was boss of the camp.

It is said the gang have been jealous of Joe. His orders to the gang were offensive, it is said, and a few days ago he came out victor in a sharp fist fight with Gonsalves.

Since then ill blood is said to have existed and there have been frequent quarrels. What precipitated the shooting is not known to the police and the other men occupying the shanty have little to say. All will be gathered in by the police as witnesses. Gonsalves fled to the woods after the shooting. Chief of Police Swift has taken charge of the hunt and he is assisted by Patrolman Harry F. Snow and Kimball Harrison, Constable Fred C. Sparrow and a large company of volunteers.

DEATH WILL NOT STOP CHARITY

Death of the anonymous donor through whose silent charity shoes and clothing have for several years been provided for several hundred children of the North End will not interfere with the good work. Truant Officer Achille Forte and the Dante Alighieri Society have taken it up and a concert in the hall of the Eliot School on North Bennett street to-morrow is expected to yield an amount that will start a fund for the keeping up of the work.

For years a man has been secretly donating hundreds of dollars yearly to provide the needy children of the North End schools with clothing and shoes. None but the principals of the various schools knew who the man was and they, in accordance with his expressed wishes, kept his identity a secret.

Recently, however, his checks failed to arrive at the customary intervals and it was reported that the unknown friend of the needy, who he is thought to have been a prominent Italian business man, was dead. Mr. Forte was interested in the matter by the school principals. He took it up with several Italian merchants of the North End and the Dante Alighieri Society decided to give the undertaking their assistance.

QUEER NEW TURN IN MANLEY SUIT

The $25,000 breach of promise suit of Annie I. Manley, a colored woman, against former Professor Philip B. Marcou of Harvard University will be before the courts again next Wednesday, when argument will be heard on the motion of former Judge Dewey, the woman's counsel, that he be allowed to file a duplicate bill of exceptions.

The bill of exceptions filed after a jury had decided against the Manley woman has been lost. It was supposedly among the papers of the late Judge Bond, who presided at the trial. It was filed at East Cambridge, June 15, 1908, and was remarkable in that it took exception to the entire charge of Judge Bond, to his attitude during the progress of the trial and to more than a hundred specific points of testimony. When Judge Dewey discovered that this bill was missing he obtained leave from Judge Richardson, in the Suffolk Superior Court, to transfer the case here from East Cambridge.

The Manley-Marcou case provided a sensation. Marcou was a professor at Harvard University, but as soon as the woman, who had several aliases, filed her suit he resigned his position.

When the case came to trial hostility soon arose between Judge Dewey, counsel for the plaintiff, and Judge Bond, and many tilts resulted, the latter giving a warning that if Dewey did not change his tactics he would be asked to sit down.

The jury found for the defence and shortly after that Professor Marcou disappeared from sight. Miss Manley, as she is known, has been kept in view through being arrested in this city on various charges.

3 MILLION ORANGES HERE

Another Big "SUNKIST" Sale Lasting All Next Week, Begins Monday, Apr. 24

The biggest lot of oranges that ever came to this city has just arrived—THREE MILLION of them. They arrived by special Fast Freight direct from the big "Sunkist" fruit groves of California. They are the "Sunkist" brand, famed for their delicious flavor and health-giving properties. Each local fruit dealer is laying in a liberal supply of "Sunkists" and on next Monday morning all dealers will put on a Special "Sunkist" Orange Sale, lasting throughout the week.

California's Finest Oranges

"Sunkists" are California's most luscious oranges—the choicest of each of 5,000 California Orange Farmers. They pack all their perfect oranges under the one name, "Sunkist," and ship them by special fast freight the day they are picked.

The "Sunkist" is a tree-ripened orange, juicy and fibreless—never pithy—every "Sunkist" is firm, solid and sound. It is picked by a gloved hand. No orange that falls to the ground or becomes bruised or damaged in any way, ever bears the "Sunkist" name.

How to Serve Them

Oranges are the most appetizing and nourishing food you can serve—at breakfast—in the sick-room—between meals—in salads, ices, sherbets and puddings.

There is no limit to the number of excellent dishes of which "Sunkist" oranges form the basis.

Buy a box of "Sunkist" oranges and your fruit dealer will make you a special price. You will find no trouble in keeping them as long as you want to, because "Sunkists" reach you in excellent condition.

Physicians Advise Them

Leading physicians say that to counteract the effect of meat and other heavy foods we eat, one should eat oranges liberally. It is a universally known fact that orange juice is an excellent food for the brain cells and a tonic for run down nerves. No better laxative than sound, ripe "Sunkist" oranges can be found.

"Sunkist" the Best Oranges to Buy

"Sunkist" oranges are cheapest to buy because they are juicy, fibreless and seedless. They are nearly all food and no waste. You lose money if you buy seedy, pithy oranges.

Free Premiums for "Sunkist" Wrappers

The "Sunkist" orange always comes in a "Sunkist" tissue paper wrapper that protects the oranges and retains all their tree ripened flavor. This name on the wrapper means you are buying, at a reasonable price, the finest orange of all.

"Sunkist" wrappers should be kept and sent to us to secure, free, a set of genuine Rogers Orange Spoons, Dessert Spoons and Fruit Knives. The patterns are new 1911 styles, designed exclusively for us. They are as attractive and stylish as money can buy. All are Rogers quality, standard A-No. 1 plate and are fully guaranteed by the makers, Wm. Rogers & Sons. No advertising appears on any of our premiums.

Read on the right the description of these valuable premiums and how to get them.

"Sunkist" Lemons

The better grade of lemons are now packed in "Sunkist" wrappers. By calling for "Sunkist" lemons, you avoid the kind that are thick-skinned, pithy and insipid. "Sunkist" lemons contain 50 per cent more juice than any other lemons. "Sunkist" lemon wrappers are accepted by our premium department.

By R. W. LARDNER.

Determined to jump up above the .500 mark and stay there, Pat Donovan's Red Sox went after the Athletics this afternoon in the second game of the first home series determined to repeat the dose administered to the World's Champions yesterday.

Chief Bender will not be seen on the mound for the champions during this engagement. The heap big Indian was left at home. He is a man who can't work much more than once a week, and Mack is saving him to pitch Tuesday's game against Washington. This game will be attended by the flag raising ceremony at Shibe Park and Bender and Johnson have been named as extra drawing cards.

The Sox do not look as hopelessly crippled as Boston folk were led to believe. In fact, they look every bit as good as at the height of their stride last season and would look a little better than that if Wagner were back at shortstop. C. Engle surprised the multitude yesterday by his speed. If he can sustain that clip, there will be no need of removing him from the guardianship of third base.

Bender at Home.

Bill Carrigan is another who seems to be a very healthy man. Bill isn't as heavy as he was in 1910. At least he doesn't look it. He showed plenty of speed getting around the bases yesterday, more than he was able to show when his underpinning was giving him so much trouble.

Most of the other invalids are about ready to labor when Patsy calls on them. Billy Purtell is able to hustle around with something resembling his old pepper. Frank Smith, having parted from some portions of his right arm that were bothering him, is possessed of as much smoke as ever and will be burning them over in a regular game before this first home stay is at an end.

The big crowd that braved the cold yesterday and traveled to the Huntington Avenue Grounds to witness the opening, was treated to all kinds of baseball. The things the Sox pulled off made all the "bugs" glad they had come, and it's safe to say that most of them wouldn't have missed the doings if pneumonia had met them at the gate and stayed right with them. It wasn't a very nice game from a Philadelphia standpoint. Jack Coombs pitched like he did in the world's series, but he wasn't able to get away with it. He was wild as a hawk and ineffective when he did manage to get 'em over.

Invalids Convalescing.

When he had quit, by request, the inhabitants of Boston got their first glimpse of Lefty Russell, the $11,000 beauty who cost something even if it wasn't that much. The big price mark on Lefty didn't feaze the Sox. They had been out in California, where most things come high. They gave Lefty a terrific beating. The score at the end was 13 to 4. The Boston base hits numbered seventeen and went for a total of twenty-six bases, which is surely some slapping of the ball. Everybody in the home batting order broke into the hit column at least once. Gardner collected a couple of doubles and a single. Speaker was content with two singles and a two-bagger and Engle helped himself to one homer and almost another one. His second wallop just missed following the path of the first one over the left field bleacher screen. As it was, the hitsman had to stop at second on it. Alva Williams stung the ball hard most of the time, but only one hit went to his credit. This came in the second inning and was followed by the easiest trip around the bases you could imagine. Mr. Coombs tried so hard to catch Alva napping that he heaved wild past Harry Davis and allowed him to go to second. Then he sent him the rest of the way with two wild and woolly pitches. Jack Lapp certainly earned his day's pay while he was in there. Coombs had him jumping first one way and then the other. If the Colby boy has as bad an aim next time he works, Mack may use all three of his catchers and give up a couple of outfielders, which are useless things when balls aren't being pitched close enough to hit. The umpires present with us are Jack Egan and William Evans. Jack wants to be recognized so he is wearing the cap of the 1910 vintage. Mr. Evans, the poet, author, journalist, football referee, fearless umpire and handsome gentleman, worked on the bases yesterday, gracefully as usual. He will be behind the plate to-day, for he and Jack change off.

IMPORTANT HIGH SCHOOL GAME TODAY

Much depends upon the result of this afternoon's game in the Suburban Interscholastic League between Medford and Somerville High Schools. Medford High thus far this season has shown by far greater speed and all-around knowledge of the game than many Greater Boston schools. Joe Fahey, the diminutive left-hander, will pitch for Medford High. Fahey last year pitched his school to the championship of the league and Wednesday made the strike-out record for the season by fanning eighteen of Everett High's players.

WHITE SOX PLAYERS CAN'T COLLECT CLAIM

CINCINNATI, O., April 22.—Charles French and C. A. Gandil, former members of the Chicago American League team, failed to convince the National Baseball Commission that Comiskey's club owes them money for back salary. They tried to collect under a recent ruling that in case a player is sent to a minor league team within ten days of the end of the minor league season he can collect his full year's salary from the major league club. Gandil and French were released to Montreal in September, but they failed to report there, and the commission dismissed their claim to-day.

BALL PLAYERS IN FIST FIGHT SUSPENDED

NEW YORK, April 22.—Manager McGinnity of Newark and Players Nattress and Hardy of Montreal were to-day indefinitely suspended by President Barrow of the Eastern League for engaging in a fist fight during the Montreal-Newark game yesterday. President Barrow said to-day that further punishment will be meted out to the ones found guilty of starting the trouble.

Notes Gathered Between Innings

Eddie Cicotte was very effective until his foes were hopelessly behind. Then he allowed them to take some liberties.

Russell had an awful time in the fifth inning. The Sox batted around, almost everybody hit the ball on the nose and the three outs were long drives to the outfield.

Mack's outfield recruit from the Pacific Coast, Hogan, was sent to bat for Russell in the ninth. He tried hard, but Hooper made a nice catch of his long drive.

Lefty Russell has a regular windmill motion when the bases are unoccupied. They weren't unoccupied very much while he was working yesterday.

Oldring and Collins got to Cicotte for a pair of triples in the sixth. The hits were twins, both going a mile over Speaker's head to the centre field fence.

Young Yerkes gave a nice exhibition of shortstopping. He had several difficult chances, but refused to slip up.

Tris Speaker appointed himself chief leader for the occupants of the bleachers in left centre. Between innings, the bugs amused themselves by yelling while Tris beat time.

Bill Carrigan pulled a funny one. In the first half of the opening inning, with Collins on first, Bill thought he saw Eddie scooting for second. As a matter of fact, Mr. Collins was standing perfectly still at first base. Anyhow, Bill let loose a peg right over second base. Naturally, no one was covering and the ball shot to centre field. Whereupon Collins dashed to second. A throw from Cicotte nailed him a moment later.

Gardner forgot himself in the seventh and threw his glove at Livingston's single as it shot past him. Davis was on first at the time. According to the rules, if the glove thus thrown had touched the ball, the runner and batter would have been entitled to three bases each. The Athletics on the bench claimed that the glove did come in contact with the pill, but Mr. Evans was on the job with a denial. So Livingston and Davis had to be content with one base apiece.

DETROIT KEEPS YOUNGSTERS

DETROIT, April 22.—Information exuded from the local baseball headquarters to-day that Treasurer McBreen of the Boston Red Sox had been here a day or two trying to purchase Catcher Beckendorf, First Baseman Ness, Third Bastman Lathers and two or three colt pitchers, of which Detroit seems to have gathered a prize crop.

But there was nothing doing. Navin intends to keep these young players where he can put his finger on them any time a regular goes wrong. He thinks they will strengthen any team in the league, and he does not intend that they shall be permitted to do so.

The wisdom of President Navin's little trick of getting waivers on all his recruits about April 1, when all other clubs had so much material that they wouldn't think of taking on any more, was proved this week.

The waivers are good for thirty days. Before they expire he will have picked the men he desires to put through a year of seasoning in the Eastern League and planted them. Had he waited until he tried out the youngsters in championship games he would have had trouble to get waivers, and the colts would have had to lose a year sitting on the bench.

SCHOOL CREWS NOT TO RACE SPRINGFIELD

The challenge by Springfield High to meet a crew of Boston schoolboys as a preliminary race to the Yale-Pennsylvania race, May 3, on the Thames, has been declined by the local school rowing authorities. In considering the challenge, the fact that the local season ends too late to allow for the selection of a representative Boston schoolboy crew for the date mentioned was responsible for the negative decision. Six schoolboy crews are training on the Charles, including the first crews of Brookline High, Roxbury Latin, Volkmann, Noble & Greenough and Cambridge Latin and the second crew of Boston Latin. Of the five first crews, Noble & Greenough and Cambridge Latin are shaping up in the most promising fashion.

CROUSE COMES TO MEET NELSON

Buck Crouse, the clever Pittsburg middleweight, who was a sensation when he boxed here some weeks ago, will arrive in Boston Sunday to finish training for his bout with Ted Nelson, the Australian, which is to be one of the twelve-round contests at the Armory A. A. next Tuesday night.

The manner in which Crouse defeated Marty Cutler, heavyweight, at Pittsburg the other night shows that he is going in grand form.

Bert Keyes, the New Yorker, who goes against Mickie McIntyre in the other twelve-round bout, will arrive here Monday morning. Keyes is a rugged boxer and should give McIntyre a stiff argument.

BLINK McCLOSKEY, ONE WHO "CAME BACK"

It was only a few years ago that Blink McClosky, the Philadelphia welterweight, found it hard to get a preliminary bout, and for a while he actually dropped out of the game for the want of matches. Now Blink is holding down Paris and making good with a vengeance. His boxing is enjoyed by the Parisians, and if all that has been said of him is correct the Philadelphian will return with a bundle of money. McClosky is greatly handicapped, having but one eye. It has often been said, however, that he could see more openings with the one good eye than many other fighters could with two good ones and it must be true, as he is knocking out his men over in Paris and those he does not win from he manages to break even with. To get an even break with Harry Lewis after twenty-five rounds is one of McClosky's recent achievements.

DESHLER MAKES DEBUT IN WIN

PHILADELPHIA, April 22.—Before a very slim crowd last night Dave Deshler of Boston made his debut at the Noaparell Athletic club against Young Nitchie by giving him a beating. Deshler, although he did very little of the forcing, knew too much for the local boy and got in telling blows to the face and stomach. In the fourth round Deshler jabbed Nitchie's face with his left hand four times without once getting a return.

PARIS EXPERTS SAY LANGFORD WON BOUT

Several translations from numerous Parisian newspapers regarding the Langford-McVey bout, which arrived yesterday all agree that Langford was robbed of the decision. It was somewhat of a surprise that the referee made such a dismal blunder, according to Parisian boxing experts. La Patrie says: "The two niggers appeared in red and green athletic drawers, which were the delight of the public, and those present laughed and the applause was almost frantic." Which of the two boxers who wore the green and red "panties" was not mentioned. "Mistah" Langford probably wore the green, as he has more Irish sympathizers than "Monsieur McVey."

NEW YORK, April 22.—Sailor Burke outpointed Tommy McMahon of Pittsburg, in a ten-round bout fought at the Twentieth Century Club here last night. McMahon floored his man three times in the first round but lacked the skill to finish a task half done. Burke fought a foul fight and in the opinion of many spectators should have been disqualified.

Smoking Isn't a Vice Unless You Make it So

You can train yourself to like only black, "heady" cigars, just as you can train yourself to crave red pepper. If you can't enjoy a cigar that doesn't make you giddy or leave a bad taste in your mouth next day, it is time for you to reform.

For thirty years the

New Sporting Features in the Sunday American

"HOW I WON THE MARATHON"

By Clarence De Mar, the winner of the great B. A. A. classic. De Mar, only nineteen years old, trained for the remarkable race in which he broke all records, in his spare time away from the shop in which he works. His own story, written expressly for tomorrow's Sunday AMERICAN, will interest everybody.

THE sporting section of the Sunday AMERICAN is the most interesting and complete ever published in New England. In addition to its already large corps of writers and cartoonists, the AMERICAN has added some of the most noted sporting experts in the world, and their articles will appear in the Sunday AMERICAN. Among them now are:

WALTER CAMP, the foremost expert on the game of football.

"TAD" JONES, the picturesque gridiron quarterback, who will write about the game as player and expert.

CHARLES E. COURTNEY, the greatest trainer of oarsmen.

WILLIAM MULDOON, the famous conditioner of men, who writes about physical training.

W. W. NAUGHTON, the dean of American writers on pugilism.

HUGH S. FULLERTON, the most graphic writer of baseball.

R. W. LARDNER, who will write the Red Sox and Rustler stories for the AMERICAN.

H. M. WALKER, the celebrated reporter of the boxing game.

"TAD," whose comic pictures convulse everybody.

HERRIMAN, the originator of "The Family Upstairs."

AND

"BUD" FISHER, with his Mutt and Jeff.

These are only a few of the men who will interest and inform and amuse you in the sporting section, and you cannot afford to miss the Arthur C. Camovito is the feature player referred to, and his friends expect him to reach the finals of the tourney. In that case his opponents would be either Travis or Kirby.

LEWISTON BOUTS BEFORE LARGE CROWD

LEWISTON, Me., May 22.—Kid Mercier of Lawrence, Mass., and Tommy Bergin of Lewiston fought two six-round bouts before a large crowd in City Hall last night. The men were in fine condition. Mercier was the cleverer, and averaged to land about two blows to Bergin's one, and was entitled to the decision had one been given.

The match was about even up to the fourth round, when Mercier administered severe punishment to the Lewiston boy. The fifth and sixth rounds were Mercier's and Tommy was groggy when the gong sounded.

In the second half of the bout Bergin was kept on the defensive, although he landed some telling blows toward the end of the fifth round. There was considerable clinching.

For the semi-final offering Mike Cunningham and Morris McCormick, both of Lewiston, fought two six-round bouts. Mike had a shade better of the match.

WATER CARNIVAL FOR COHASSET

The Cohasset Yacht Club and the citizens of the town are arranging for a water carnival and races to be held early in August as a sort of dedication of the improvements made at Cohasset Harbor.

Fully $45,000 has been spent by the State and federal governments, town and private subscriptions in making this harbor one of the best on the South Shore.

A movement is on foot among a number of the members to have a class of sonder boats replace the one design class that has been sold.

The Ways of a Maid

By WINIFRED BLACK

SO sweet sixteen won't act like sad sixty, eh?

These girls—these girls, they are a trial, aren't they? Now, if they'd only be good, be real good, and never need a scolding, never had to be reminded that the world is made for some one besides their own pretty little selves, never be lazy, or dull, or selfish, or unkind, or careless, they'd fly straight up to the clouds and be done with it, wouldn't they?

Careless, selfish—of course she is; all girls are till someone makes them be something else.

My hair, my figure, my eyes, my brain, my walk, my individuality—that's all she thinks of, dear, little, sweet sixteen. That's why she needs a mother or a maiden aunt, or a grandmother, or someone to keep after her and beat some sense of proportion into her charming little head. The world's brand new. It seems brand new and shining, and all hers, every bit hers.

And it's no such fogy world to her as it looks to you, either. It's romantic and full of exciting things, and so delightful and so fascinating that she just can't stop thinking about it and go and dust the parlor, or help arrange the books, or even fill the vases.

When she's in that stuffy old parlor who knows but Prince Charming may ride by all in silver armor, looking his eyes out for her and being so disappointed when he doesn't find her?

What! sweep the porch, just to help mother, a middle-aged woman who is more interested in cook books than she is in poetry? Why, she could be reading all about the Lily Maid of Astolot, and wishing she could see Launcelot, and wondering what Guinevere really looked like, and whether she wore her own hair all the time, or had a few teeny puffs to put on when there was a joust or a tournament or something.

Help take care of the baby—when she ought to be out on the porch eating fudge and—waiting? Not she—not if she can help it.

Waiting for what?

Why, for anything, for everything, for the whole glittering procession of life to ride by with banners and sweet music thrilling.

Wash the dishes and spoil those hands? Tut-tut! What would Prince Charming think of that?

Poor girl—poor, little, foolish, high-headed, selfish, vain girl! She's asleep and it's your business to wake her up.

How? Well, how would it do to be very busy all the morning and let the little girl sit on the porch and dream about luncheon till she gets hungry enough to go in and get some for herself?

Walk out of the kitchen after dinner one of these days and say: "Marguerite, I'm going to read for a while now. Do the dishes, please." And don't wait to see how she looks or what she does; just go and just stay, and let her see that those dishes will never be washed in the world unless the fair Marguerite washes them herself.

Is she going to a party? Don't freshen up her dress for her. She left it in a mussy heap on the floor the last time she wore it, didn't she? Leave it here, and when the party comes she'll wish she'd hung it up as you suggested.

That new hat getting dusty on the top of her bureau? Just draw her attention to it, and let it stay there. Don't scold, don't fret, don't nag—just expect.

Act as if you never thought of doing her work for her and expect her not only to do every bit of it for herself, but to help you out, too.

She'll come out all right if you give her half a chance—dear, little, foolish, selfish, thoughtless daughter. See if she doesn't.

That's Different

A MAN who had business in Washington the other day called to see Dr. Wiley, the government's food expert. In the course of their talk they discussed the persistence of some food manufacturers in violating the pure food laws.

"One trouble is that so many persons lack a sense of moral obligation," said Dr. Wiley. "They seem to think that if they are not found out they cannot have done anything wrong. They remind me of a little boy I once encountered gathering mushrooms in a meadow.

"I looked into his bag and, to my amazement, I saw he had mostly toadstools.

"'See here,' said I, 'those are poison; you mustn't eat them.'

"'Oh, that's al right,' replied the youngster; 'they ain't fer eatin'. They's for sale.'"

The Wonder Girl's Chafing Dish Spoon

The Wonder Girl's a modern miss;
No silly-fluffy she!
Jack almost fears she'll ban the kiss
By Science's decree.

She's up in all domestic lore,
And when at last they wed,
JACK won't get dinners a la store,
Nor biscuits built of lead.

But rarebits are a social TOY;
They are not meant to EAT.
To watch her make one—that's the joy—
The richest, dearest treat:

The dainty hands that deftly fly,
To brow with wisdom grave,
The lovely eyes, the worried sigh
That makes the cheese behave.

But when the ale is in and all
With red paprika blurred,
Of course, the regulations call
For rarebits to be stirred.

And some folk (who have things to learn)
Believe it is unwise
To pause and let a rarebit burn
In such emergencies.

Not so the Wonder Girl. She knows
All culinary things.
On chafing dishes she bestows
No needless sorrowings.

When Jack arrives, let rarebits rest.
Why, e'en the dullest loons
Know that in cooking it is best
For one to change her spoons.

THE WAR IN THE AIR

A Thrilling Story of the Invasion of This Country by a Hostile Sky Fleet. By H. G. Wells. Copyright by the Macmillan Company

CHAPTER V.—(Continued)

A WIND was rising rather strongly from the southeast. It obliged the Vaterland to come about in that direction and made her roll a great deal as she went to and fro over Manhattan Island.

Away in the northwest clouds gathered. The throb-throb of her slow screw working against the breeze was much more perceptible than when she was going full speed ahead, and the friction of the wind against the under side of the gas chamber drove a series of shallow ripples along it and made a faint flapping sound like but fainter than the beating of ripples under the stem of a boat.

She was stationed over the temporary City Hall in the Park Row building, and every now and then she would descend to resume communication with the Mayor and with Washington.

But the restlessness of the Prince would not suffer him to remain for long in any one place. Now he would circle over the Hudson and East River; now he would go up high, as if to peer away into the blue distances; once he ascended so swiftly and so far that mountain sickness overtook him and the crew and forced him down again, and Bert shared the dizziness and nausea.

Coming of the Storm

It dawned upon Bert that hardly a third of the fleet was visible. The others had gone upon errands he could not imagine, beyond the compass of that great circle of earth and sky. He wondered, but there was no one to ask.

As the day wore on about a dozen reappeared in the east with their stores replenished from the flotilla and towing a number of drachenflieger.

All that day the Prince was negotiating with Washington, while his detached scouts sought far and wide over the Eastern States for anything resembling an aeronautic park. A squadron of twenty airships detached overnight had dropped out of the air upon Niagara and was holding the town and power works.

Meanwhile the insurrectionary movement in the giant city grew uncontrollable. In spite of five great fires already involving many acres and spreading steadily, New York was still not satisfied that she was beaten.

At first the rebellious spirit below found vent only in isolated shouts, street crowd speeches and newspaper suggestions; then it found much more definite expression in the appearance in the morning sunlight of American flags at point after point above the architectural cliffs of the city.

It is quite possible that in many cases this spirited display of bunting by a city already surrendered was the outcome of the innocent informality of the American mind, but it is also undeniable that in many it was a deliberate indication that the people "felt wicked."

The German sense of correctitude was deeply shocked at this outbeak. The Graf von Winterfeld immediately communicated with the Mayor and pointed out the irregularity, and the fire lookout stations were instructed in the matter.

The New York police were speedily hard at work, and a foolish contest in full swing between impassioned citizens resolved to keep the flag flying and irritated and worried officers instructed to pull it down.

The touble became acute at last in the streets above Columbia University. The captain of the airship watching this quarter seems to have stopped to lasso and drag from its staff a flag hoisted upon Morgan Hall. As he did so a volley of rifle and revolver shots was fired from the upper windows of the huge apartment building that stands between the university and Riverside drive.

Most of these were ineffectual, but two or three perforated gas chambers and one smashed the hand and arm of a man upon the forward platform.

The sentinel on the lower gallery immediately replied, and the machine gun on the shield of the eagle let fly and promptly stopped any further shots.

The airship rose and signaled the flagship and city hall, police and militiamen were directed at once to the spot, and this particular incident closed.

But hard upon that came the desperate attempt of a party of young clubmen from New York who, inspired by patriotic and adventurous imaginations, slipped off in half a dozen motor cars to Beacon Hill and set to work with remarkable vigor to improvise a fort about the Doan swivel gun that had been placed there.

They found it still in the hands of the disgusted gunners, who had been ordered to cease fire at the capitulation, and it was easy to infect these men with their own spirit.

They declared their gun hadn't had half a chance and were burning to show what it could do. Directed by the newcomers, they made a trench and bank about the mounting of the piece and constructed flimsy shelter pits of corrugated iron.

The Bingen Disabled

They were actually loading the gun when they were observed by the airship Preussen, and the shell they succeeded in firing before the bombs of the latter smashed them and their crude defences to fragments burst over the middle gas chambers of the Bingen and brought her to earth, disabled, upon Staten Island.

She was badly deflated and dropped among trees, over which her empty central gas bags spread in canopies and festoons. Nothing, however, had caught fire, and her men were speedily at work upon her repair. They behaved with a confidence that verged upon indiscretion.

While most of them commenced patching the tears of the membrane, half a dozen of them started off for the nearest road in search of a gas main and presently found themselves prisoners in the hands of a hostile crowd.

Close at hand was a number of villa residences, whose occupants speedily developed an unfriendly curiosity to aggression. At that time the police control of the large polyglot population of Staten Island had become very lax, and scarcely a household but had its rifle or pistols and ammunition.

These were presently produced, and after two or three misses one of the men at work was hit in the foot. Thereupon the Germans left their sewing and mending, took over among the trees and replied.

The crackling of shots speedily brought the Preussen and Kiel on the scene, and with a few hand grenades they made short work of every villa within a mile.

A number of non-combatant American men, women and children were killed and the actual assailants driven off.

For a time the repairs went on in peace under the immediate protection of these two airships.

About 8 o'clock the Bingen was rushed by an armed mob and all its defenders killed after a fierce, disorderly struggle.

The difficulty of the Germans in both these cases came from the impossibility of landing any efficient force, or indeed, any force at all from the air fleet.

The airships were quite unequal to the transport of any adequate landing parties. Their complement of men was just sufficient to manoeuvre and fight them in the air.

From above they could inflict immense damage. They could reduce any organized government to a capitulation in the briefest space, but they could not disarm, much less could they occupy, the surrendered areas below. They had to trust to the pressure upon the authorities below of a threat to renew the bombardment.

It was their sole resource. No doubt with a highly organized and undamaged government and a homogenous and well-disciplined people that would have sufficed to keep the peace.

But this was not the American case. Not only was the New York government a weak one and insufficiently provided with police, but the destruction of the City Hall and postoffice and other central ganglia had hopelessly disorganized the co-operation of part with part.

The street cars and railways had ceased. The telephone service was out of gear and worked only intermittently.

The Germans had struck at the head, and the head was conquered and stunned—only to release the body from its rule.

New York had become a headless monster, no longer capable of collective submission. Everywhere it lifted itself rebelliously; everywhere authorities and officials, left to their own initiative, were joining in the arming and flag hoisting and excitement of that afternoon.

At Union Square

The disintegrating truce gave place to a definite general breach with the assassination of the Wetterhorn—for that is the only possible word for the act—above Union square and not a mile away from the exemplary ruins of City Hall.

This occurred late in the afternoon, between five and six.

By that time the weather had changed very much for the worse, and the operations of the airships were embarrassed by the necessity they were under of keeping head-on to the gusts.

A series of squalls with hail and thunder, followed one another from the south by southeast, and in order to avoid these as much as possible the air fleet came low over the houses, diminishing its range of observation and exposing itself to a rifle attack.

Overnight there had been a gun placed in Union square. It had never been mounted, much less fired, and in the darkness after the surrender it was taken with its supplies and put out of the way under the arches of the great Dexter building.

Here late in the morning it was remarked by a number of patriotic spirits. They set to work to hoist and mount it inside the upper floors of the place.

They made, in fact, a masked battery behind the decorous office blinds and there lay in wait as simply excited as children until at last the stem of the luckless Wetterhorn appeared, beating and rolling at quarter speed over the recently reconstructed pinnacles of Tiffany's. Promptly that one gun battery unmasked.

The airship lookout man must have seen the whole of the tenth floor of the Dexter building crumble out and smash in the street below to discover the black muzzle looking out from the shadows behind. Then, perhaps, the shell hit him.

The gun fired two shells before the frame of the Dexter building collapsed, and each shell raked the Wetterhorn from stem to stern. They smashed her exhaustively. She crumpled up like a can that has been kicked by a heavy boot.

Her fore part came down in the square, and the rest of her length, with a great snapping and twisting of shafts and stays, descended, collapsing athwart Tammany Hall and the streets toward Second avenue.

Her gas escaped to mix with air, and the air of her rent balloonette poured into her deflating gas chambers.

Then with an immense impact she exploded.

The Vaterland at that time was beating up to the south of City Hall from over the ruins of the Brooklyn Bridge, and the reports of the gun, followed by the first crashes of the collapsing Dexter building, brought Kurt and Smallways to the cabin porthole.

They were in time to see the flash of the exploding gun, and then they were first flattened against the window and then rolled head over heels across the floor of the cabin by the air wave of the explosion.

The Vaterland bounded like a football some one has kicked, and when they looked out again Union square was small and remote and shattered, as though some cosmically vast giant had rolled over it.

The buildings to the east of it were ablaze at a dozen points under the flaming tatters and warping skeleton of the airship, and all the roofs and walls were ridiculously askew and crumbling as one looked.

"Gaw!" said Bert. "What's happened? Look at the people!"

But before Kurt could produce an explanation the shrill bells of the airship were ringing to quarters, and he had to go.

Bert hesitated and stepped thoughtfully into the passage, looking back at the window as he did so. He was knocked off his feet at once by the prince, who was rushing headlong from his cabin to the central magazine.

"Blut und Eisen!" He Cried

Bert had a momentary impression of the great figure of the prince, white with rage, bristling with gigantic anger, his huge fist swinging. "Blut und Eisen!" cried teh prince, as one who swears, "Oh, Blut und Eisen!"

Some one fell over Bert—something in the manner of falling suggested Von Winterfeld—and some one else paused and kicked him spitefully and hard. Then he was sitting up in the passage, rubbing a freshly bruised cheek and readjusting the bandage he still wore on his head.

"Dem that prince," said Bert, indignant beyond measure. "'E 'asn't the menners of a 'og!"

He stood up, collected his wits for a minute, and then went slowly toward the gangway of the little gallery.

As he did so he heard noises suggestive of the return of the prince. The lot of them were coming back again. He shot into his cabin like a rabbit into its burrow just in time to escape that shouting terror.

He shut the door, waited until the passage was still, then went across to the window and looked out. A drift of cloud made the prospect of the streets and squares hazy, and the rolling of the airship swung the picture up and down.

A few people were running to and fro, but for the most part the aspect of the district was desertion.

The streets seemed to broaden out; they became cleared and the little dots that were people larger as the Vaterland came down again.

Presently she was swaying along above the lower end of Broadway. The dots below, Bert saw, were not running now, but standing and looking up. Then suddenly they were all running again.

Something had dropped from the aeroplane—something that looked small and flimsy. It hit the pavement near a big archway just underneath Bert.

A little man was sprinting along the sidewalk within half a dozen yards, and two or three others and one woman were bolting across the roadway.

Then blinding flames squirted out in all directions from the point of impact, and the little man who had jumped became for an instant a flash of fire and vanished—vanished absolutely.

The Massacre of New York

The people running out into the road took preposterous clumsy leaps, then flopped down and lay still, with their torn clothes smoldering into flame.

Then pieces of the archway began to drop, and the lower masonary of the building to fall in with the rumbling sound of coals being shot into a cellar.

In this manner the massacre of New York began. She was the first of the great cities of the scientific age to suffer by the enormous powers and grotesque limitations of aerial warfare.

She was wrecked, as in the previous century endless barbaric cities had been bombarded, because she was at once too strong to be occupied and too undisciplined and proud to surrender in order to escape destruction.

Given the circumstances, the thing had to be done. It was impossible for the Prince to desist and own himself defeated, and it was impossible to subdue the city except by largely destroying it.

The catastrophe was the logical outcome of the situation, created by the application of science to warfare. It was unavoidable that great cities should be destroyed.

In spite of his intense exasperation with his dilemma, the Prince sought to be moderate even in massacre. He tried to give a memorable lesson with the minimum waste of life and the minimum expenditure of explosives, for that night he purposed only the wrecking of Broadway.

The Destruction of Broadway

He directed the air fleet to move in column over the route of this thoroughfare, dropping bombs, the Vaterland leading. And so our Bert Smallways became a participant in one of the most cold-blooded slaughters in the world's history, in which men who were neither excited nor, except for the remotest chance of a bullet, in any danger, poured death and destruction upon homes and crowds below.

He clung to the frame of the porthole as the airship tossed and swayed and stared down, through the light rain that now drove before the wind, into the twilight streets, watching people running out of the houses, watching buildings collapse and fires begin.

As the airships sailed along they smashed up the city as a child will shatter its cities of brick and card.

Below they left ruins and blazing conflagrations and heaped and scattered dead, men, women and children mixed together as though they had been no more than Moors or Zulus or Chinese.

Lower New York was soon a furnace of crimson flames from which there was no escape. Cars, railways, ferries, all had ceased. Never a light lit the way of the distracted fugitives in that dusky confusion but the light of burning. He had glimpses of what it must mean to be down there—glimpses.

Married Life Second Year

By MABEL HERBERT URNER

In Which Helen Tells Warren That She Is Going Home With Her Mother

"YOU think WHAT?" Warren set down his cup and glared across the table. Helen's mother had finished her breakfast and they were alone.

"I think I shall take Winifred and go home with mother for a visit," Helen repeated, quietly.

"And when did you decide on that?"

"Last night, when you left me alone on the street."

"Oh, I see," and he resumed his breakfast in grim silence. It was this silence that always disconcerted Helen. Whatever the circumstances, it always made her feel that she was in the wrong.

"Since we find it so difficult to get along together, don't you think that for me to go away for a while might be best for us both?"

"I suppose your mother suggested this?"

"Mother invited me to go home with her. Why shouldn't she? Is there anything so unusual in that? I haven't been home since we married."

Again the grim silence.

"Surely, Warren, when we've reached the point where you get in such a rage that you walk off and leave me alone on the street, don't you think it's time we were separated for awhile?"

"Oh, That's It?" He Asked

"Oh, THAT'S it, is it? You are still harping on that. So this is just a clever ruse to make me do penance for last night? Well, you'll find it won't work."

"You know very well it is nothing of the kind. Mother asked me several days ago to go home with her. I hadn't spoken to you because I was not decided. Last night helped me to decide. That's all. And I shouldn't think it would matter to you since you spend most of your evenings out, anyway. Delia can look after the apartment and give you your meals. They're about all you are home for now."

"Never mind about the meals; I'll get them down town."

Helen started. She had not thought of that. "Oh, I wouldn't—hotel and restaurant food never agrees with you. It would be much better to have them here."

"Now, look here, you've planned this trip to suit yourself. But don't think for a minute you're going to manage things for me here. I'll take my meals wherever I blame please! And I tell you right here, that your wanting to manage everything is one of the things I've grown pretty tired of."

"Well, you'll soon be relieved of all that. I think I said this trip might be very good for us both."

An Eternal Quarrel.

"Well, I haven't objected, have I? I'm about as sick of this eternal quarreling and quibbling as you are. I hope the change may have a beneficial effect on your disposition. You made a fine exhibition of yourself on the street last night."

"Warren, how can you say that?"

"Well, didn't you; didn't you jerk away from me and say you weren't going home?"

"I didn't jerk away, as you call it. I simply said I wasn't going to be taken home and left there by way of punishment, while you finished your walk alone. I'm not a child to be treated like that."

"Well, when I take a walk in the evening it is for exercise and relaxation. And to have you along stirring up an argument or a quarrel is not conducive to either."

Helen looked up in amazement.

"Warren, sometimes I think you are the most unjust and untruthful man I have ever known. I don't see how you can distort facts and make some of the statements you do."

"What did I say there? Didn't you do just what I claimed you did?"

"Don't, Warren, don't let's discuss it. I am sorry now I brought it up."

"Oh, you admit you brought it up, do you? You don't usually admit that much."

Helen threw out her hands with a sigh of hopeless weariness. "What's the use of our ever trying to talk or come to an understanding about anything?"

He pushed back his chair and rose angrily from the table.

"Well, I'll tell you one thing right now—you can't go on this visit any too soon to suit me!"

EASY BOYS, WE HAVE CLAUDE ESCLAIRE NOW
GERSHWOOD

Claude has Desmond and Gomgotz at his mercy, but, instead of putting an end to their nefarious careers at once, he prefers to go and hunt up the Admiral of the British fleet, so that everything may be done according to law. No one has anything on us when it comes to respect for law, but there are times when you want to forget all that.

Meanwhile, Rosamond is left to guard the criminals and see that they do not get away. But a tropical rainstorm comes up and forces her to seek shelter. She can watch the crooks just as well from behind a tree, and, besides, they are tied hand and foot and buried up to their necks in sand, so they haven't a chance in the world to escape.

You may have noticed in the course of your nature studies that sand and water have a marked affinity for each other. When combined they form what is commonly known as mud. Ordinarily, human beings do not like to come in contact with mud, but when one's life is in danger, everything goes. With these few remarks, we will pass on to the next picture.

Desmond and his savage pal have rolled themselves up in a big ball of mud and are going down hill to beat the cars. They don't know where they are going to land, but they don't want to stick around the spot where Rosamond is standing guard with that rifle. There's no telling what minute she might get nervous and pull the trigger.

That villain Desmond always was a lucky guy. Here he starts rolling down hill without the faintest idea of what his destination is to be and brings up right in the camp of the wild men, who are the best friends he has on earth. Just because he can inhale cigarette smoke and blow it out through his nose, these benighted heathen think he's a wonder.

There's Claude walking along the water's edge still looking for the British sailors. The wild men will get him if he don't watch out. Then they'll get Rosamond, and Desmond will have things all his own way. But the hour of retribution will come—perhaps in Monday's pictures. And then, again, perhaps not. Remember, we make no promises.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

BETTER NOT WRITE

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:
A young man used to call upon me frequently, but now he no longer comes to see me. I do not know of anything I have done to anger him. Should I write? I am heartbroken. Please don't tell me to forget him, as I think I never could.

Do you think if he loves me he would treat me the way he does?

J. M'L.

MY dear, you cannot force his love. If you wrote him, it would look as though you were running after him. I will not tell you to forget him; but to try to be a woman and bear it bravely if you have to do without him.

A GREAT DIFFERENCE

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:
I am a young lady seventeen years old and have been keeping company with a young man thirty-five years old, and he has asked me to marry him.

Do you think I would be doing wrong in doing so, as I think I love him?

L. F. B.

I WOULD advise you to wait before marry a man so many years your senior. You are too young to marry for a few years in any case. In two years' time you will be more sure of how you really feel toward him.

And after trying, you ask him over to taste yours.

"Why!" he bursts forth, "that's the best coffee I ever drank. How do you make it?"

"Same way you do," you reply.

"Then where in the world do you buy such coffee?" he asks.

CHAPTER XV.—(Continued)

BUT "No," she said. "No" again. And she held his arm tightly. The touch of something that was alive and friendly seemed to be the best thing in the world—the only thing.

"I must go, you know," he said with gentle reasonableness.

"Me, too," she said, childishly.

"Very well—I will go first. You can come after me if you like."

"No," she said again. "Something might come behind me. Let me go first. Everything's easier if you face it."

"Be good and stay here," he tried again. But it was useless.

"Then let us go together—as we did when we fetched the letters," he said.

"I shall go first," she insisted. "And you will see that nothing comes creeping up behind me, won't you?"

That something might so creep was possible. He yielded.

Locating the Sound

Thus for the second time they went up the stairs, for it was from above that the sound had seemed to come.

The electric lights still glowed steadily. They looked into every room on the first landing. It was near the top of the second flight that she stopped suddenly, as an electric light stops when you turn off the switch. She was three steps ahead of him, so that she could see the landing, and he could not.

"I am not at all afraid now," she said in a cool new voice. "Turn round. Look downstairs. I want to say something to you."

He turned, in obedience.

"Now," she said, "will you trust me?"

"You know I do."

"Well—don't look round. I've just seen something that changes everything—something that makes me quite brave—something I don't want you to see. Will you go back and wait for me at the bottom of the stairs?"

"You're asking a very hard thing," he said. "No—nonsense, I can't let you go."

"You must," she said. "You think because I've been so frightened to-night that I'm not brave—but I am. When there's anything to be done I never break down—never. It's only when you can't do anything."

"You know who is up there?"

"Yes. Let me go."

"No," he said, "I can't let you go alone. It's not safe."

"Do as I Tell You."

"Ah," she said, "that's only because you don't understand. Go down. You're thinking of madmen and murderers—it's not that. If I call out you can be up there with me in half a moment. Oh, for pity's sake, for God's sake, do as I tell you."

Then he went down.

"God forgive me if I'm a fool," he said as he went.

He stood at the stair foot, his hand on the broad balustrade, his foot on the third step, ready to spring up to her if she should call.

He heard movements overhead, heard a door open, heard her voice in low, passionate tones of pain and pity—heard another voice.

And he stood still.

It will be counted to him, when the time comes for counting things, that he stood still, and waited, loyally; curiosity, excitement, and something deeper and stronger, warring sickeningly in him.

Then she came down the stairs, leaned down toward him, and said: "It's all right. Come down."

Arrived in the parlor, she spoke.

"I am not afraid at all now. I have trusted you, and I am going to trust you more. I trust you as I trust myself: What I found up there . . . It's some one I love very much, and he's . . . Oh, it's no use pretending about it. He's . . . he has . . . oh, how odd it is when the words go away and hide like this. He killed my husband. . . . I don't know why, yet, nor how . . . he was mad—you were quite right—but he's not mad now—and he's shot himself. I think he's dying. You must go for the doctor. And get a nurse—a Catholic sister. They don't blab.

"The police," said the chauffeur for the twentieth time that night, and yet he was not at all a stupid man.

"Ah," cried Sandra in a note of indescribable anguish, "don't you desert me—don't you try to do 'the proper thing.' You can have as many police as you like presently. Oh!—I know he won't live long—my dear, my poor—he did it for me . . . Oh, it's not fair—it's not fair. Will you go for the doctor or must I go?" She stamped her foot.

"Can you trust the doctor?"

"He's Uncle Mosenthal's slave. Uncle Mosenthal saved him in some trouble or other. He's always attended all of us. Oh, go—go!"

She came closer to him.

"Why do you keep on saying the same things over and over again?" she said. "Don't you understand? I thought you weren't stupid. But one never knows. Don't you see? This real thing—that he's done it—wipes out all that silly horror. What's a dead man's head in a cupboard compared with him dying in that awful pain because he loved me. Don't you see it's my fault—my doing? Don't you see that nothing in the world counts except what I can do for him—now he's done this terrible thing for me? And you think I'm afraid to be left!"

She turned with a rush, almost winged to the cabinet, unlocked it, took out the head and set it on the table.

"There!" she said, "it's nothing to me. Less than nothing. I'd sit and hold it in my lap all night if it would do him any good."

"How you love him!" said the chauffeur, in a low voice. "Let me put that thing away. Yes—I'll go."

He replaced the horror in the cabinet, locked it up and put the key in his pocket.

"You'll not stay here?"

"Bring a Doctor," She Cried

"No—I shall be with him. Give me the brandy—that little goldy decanter. Now go. Oh, thank God I've a man to help me to-night. Go—go—go—Thirty-seven Harley street. Don't leave a message. If he's not in, find out where he is and bring him home. Yes—take the brougham, of course. He knows all about it."

When he had gone she flew up the stairs and into an attic room.

On the bed lay a man, in shirt and trousers. The white of the shirt was brownly stained, and through the sash that she had tied round it five minutes before fresh red was already oozing.

She threw herself on her knees beside the bed, kissing the pale cheek and closed yes—laying her own cheek, warm now and read, against the cold lips tightly closed.

"Oh, my dear—my dear," she said again and again; "my poor love—my darling."

The heavy lids lifted an instant and the pale lips moved.

"I oughtn't to have come here. It was for you—I think. But everything's so odd. If you could get the doctor and put me together a little—I should like to . . . to . . . tell you how it happened. CHAPTER XVI.

The Serving Man

THERE was no sunlight in the garden courtyard where the pink geraniums were, and the Pot of Basil urns, and the little fountain, forgotten these many hours, yet still industriously playing, rising and falling conscientiously and plashings on its diggy stone basin. But the morning light was there—the light that makes all things new.

John Smith stood at the window of the bare sitting room with the Middle Victorian trimmings of The House With No Address, looking down at the fountain and the ferns and the trailing pink flowers. In the little kitchen a kettle was spurting and spilling on the gas stove.

The man by the window turned now and then to glance at a something curled up in the corner of a sofa—something covered by an Indian shawl that rose and fell to soft breathing.

He glanced, but he did not look. Because he knew, as well as you or I do, that if you look at a sleeping person long enough you wake it.

He had had adventures—a many—being one of those to whom adventures come as commonplaces of life do to other men. But yesterday, and the night that followed yesterday, these surpassed all that had ever happened to him.

Sylvia's Romance

As adventures were natural to him, so, it seemed, was romance natural to Sylvia. She attracted it, as a magnet attracts needles.

And now the poor little magnet—bristling with steel points, undesired and unsought—slept—but metaphors are silly beasts anyhow, and why should a story-teller take any pride in training them to run on all fours?

Yesterday had been wonderful. And the night of it more than wonderful. There had been the terror of the child—and his soothing of that terror, his sense that he was able to control her soul, to master her terrors. There had been that sound on the stairs—her advance—his inaction. Then the sudden incursion of competent science and calm devotion into that strange house.

There had been things to do—things to fetch. Then, when the nurse was established beside the man in the room upstairs, and the doctor had gone—having made Sylvia swallow a sleeping draught and bidden her rest—"to be well and strong to look after him to-morrow"—the house had grown quiet again, and he and she had been alone in that room with a third—a dominant, insistent presence—intense wakefulness—not the mere absence of sleep, but a living, possessing force.

The results of sleeping draughts are not calculated even by the supreme physician. And the opiate had only served to quicken every nerve, to excite every thought which it was meant to soothe.

Sylvia had sat in the deep chair and talked. The chauffeur had wondered now and again through the hours whether she realized at all that it was to her chauffeur that she was talking.

When in the slate-gray beginnings of dawn shivering came to her, and he made her lie down, and covered her with the Indian shawl, he knew that he knew her heart and soul as no other man had ever known them. And he had felt that that heart and soul would never thus be known by any other man in this world.

Her Sad Life Story

She told him everything—happenings of her childhood—her youth. She told him the tale of her marriage. She told him the little, poor, sad life-story of Pan—the dreams and hopes that her lips had never before had words for—all these she laid before him as a child lays before its friend the treasures of shell and seaweed it has picked up on the fringe of the sea.

Only one thing she did not tell him. She said nothing of her lover. She did not breathe the name of the man who lay between life and death in the room upstairs. Of all else she had spoken, frankly, confidingly, as one certain that her listener will understand.

He stood by the window, thinking the absolutely conventional thoughts: "I wish I had been a better man," "I wish I had met her years ago," "I wish I hadn't been such a beast," "I wish . . ." There was nothing original in his reflections. There never is anything original in the reflections of a man in love. No—nor in those of a woman, either, gentle reader; so do not flatter yourself.

The remembrance of it all, sweeping suddenly like a searchlight over the chauffeur's soul, turned him a little giddy. "Poor child," he said, "poor, brave, pretty child. And her lover's killed her husband—and—where's it all to end—where are we going?"

His eye fell on the Buhl cabinet. "That—at least," he said, "shall go." He took the key from his pocket, opened the door, and lifted the misshapen bundle from the velvet shelf.

But as he turned toward the door he saw that the Indian shawl was stirring; an arm came out from it—two arms, stretching sleepily.

Instantly he replaced the head and came to stand by the sofa, saying quietly and strongly: "Don't be frightened. Everything's all right." In moments of stress one is a little apt to repeat oneself.

She sat up, her black banks of hair slipping loosened to her shoulders, her eyes vacant and wondering.

"Ah," she sighed; "yes, I remember."

Her feet found the floor.

"How good of you," she said, "to be here when I woke. The nurse hasn't been down? He hasn't roused? Hasn't asked for me? No—or of course you'd have waked me. I must go and see."

She went out. When she came back, hair bound up and hands and face fresh from cold water, he was in the kitchen.

"You must have breakfast," he said. "I'm quite a fair cook. I shall make you scrambled eggs."

He insisted, and she yielded, though breakfast seemed a silly, useless convention that she had once admitted and now saw through. She found it pleasant to be taken care of. It gave her the sensation of warmth to the heart which you feel when you come in out of the cold and find the fire burning redly and the curtains drawn—by some one who has thought your coming long. Besides . . .

"If you ever needed your pluck you need it now," she told herself, and was wise enough to see that courage is more nourishingly fed on eggs and chocolate than on the empty need of it. But . . .

"You, too," she said. "I shan't eat unless you do."

"When you've finished . . . ?" he said. She laughed bitterly.

"Do you want to teach me my place?" she said. "Don't let's pretend any more."

Then he in turn was wise and did not ask her what she meant.

When the meal was eaten and the table cleared, only its pink flowers remaining, he came and stood before her.

"And what," he said "are the orders for the day?"

She looked at him blankly. But the blank gave way to a look that thrilled him. Because it said: "Why do you ask me? You are the master. It is you who must tell me what to do."

Her eyes were years older than Sylvia's eyes of yesterday—and she was very pale. There were purple settings to the Irish eyes, but her dress was neat as always. There was in her air no trace of what novelists call "the disorder of the past night."

"Well," he said, "what's to be done? Will you be advised, and let me go for the police?" I am sorry he was so one-ideaed, but such was the fact.

"No," she said; but he knew that if he chose he could make her say "Yes."

He did not choose. And what he knew she admitted.

For she went on, and her voice was pleading: "Not yet. Not to-day. You won't make me do it to-day?"

"I am your servant," he said; "it is for you to give the orders."

"Don't," she said.

"Well, then?" said he.

"I think I want Aunt Bess. Will you telegraph for her? And you'd better telegraph to Denny, too. Denis, Wood House, Hadlow."

To Be Continued Monday.

Preventing a Disturbance

COLONEL SCOTCHEM was weary. He had had a very arduous day retreating from the enemy, and he wished to recoup his strength in order that he might retreat still further on the morrow.

"MacPherson," he said to his new servant, "I'm going to snatch forty winks' sleep. Stay by my tent, and see that I'm not disturbed."

Mac saluted. Five minutes later the snores of Colonel Scotchem were cut short by the loud report of a gun.

"Great Scott!" cried the Colonel. "Are the enemy upon us?"

"Na, dinna fret," replied Mac, inserting his head reassuringly through the tent flap. "It was only a wee mousie. But as I thought he might wake you up I shot him."

Retort Sarcastic

MRS. CARRIE CHAPMAN CATT, the well-known writer and lecturer, in an address on woman suffrage, said:

"A famous editor was arguing with me the other day.

"'But,' he said, 'women can't pretend to be men's equals. Take war, for instance. Suppose a war arose between us and England, or us and Germany, or us and Japan, what would you do then, madam?'

"'I'd do the same as you would,' I answered promptly. 'I'd sit at my desk and write articles urging other people to go and fight.'"

Think what it means to be forever free from sweeping, dusting and tearing up. Think what it means to do away with all of the drudgery which sweeping and dusting bring, to make cleaning a pleasure instead of a bug-bear.

"Collect the Dust —Don't Spread It"

When You Rent—Insist on "RICHMOND" Vacuum Cleaning

You have the same right to expect RICHMOND Vacuum Cleaning in the apartment, the house or the office you rent, that you have to expect steam heat, sanitary plumbing, electric lighting, or hot water on tap.

For as a convenience it exceeds steam heat.

As a health measure, it exceeds sanitary plumbing.

As a luxury it exceeds electricity and hot water on tap.

And, unlike all other luxuries, RICHMOND vacuum cleaning offers you a positive economy—an actual saving in labor—an actual dollars and cents saving on the wear and tear of the cherished furniture and furnishings with which you have surrounded yourself.

It offers not only freedom from the worst drudgery in the world—not only freedom from the annual tear-up called housecleaning—not only freedom from dust and germs and their dangers—but it offers a positive saving in your yearly expenses.

Yet the installation of RICHMOND Vacuum Cleaning costs your landlord but little.

Modern plumbing costs approximately seven per cent. of the total cost of a residence, and averages one and one-half per cent. per annum for service and maintenance.

Modern heating costs ten per cent. and three per cent. per annum.

Electric lighting costs seven per cent.—and three per cent. per annum.

RICHMOND Vacuum Cleaning costs from two to five per cent. to install—and so little to operate that the per annum percentage can hardly be figured!

RICHMOND Vacuum Cleaning can readily be installed in old buildings as well as new—in residences, apartments, hotels, schools, office buildings, libraries, churches, theatres, factories, stores, garages and public buildings.

The initial expense is small—the annual saving is great. Send the convenient coupon, or write.

MANY BEQUESTS IN OLIN'S WILL

Many bequests to friends and fellow Grand Army men are contained in the will of Colonel William M. Olin, Secretary of State for Massachusetts for twenty years, which was filed in the Suffolk County Probate Court. Bequests are as follows: To George Olin, brother, $5,000; to John E. Gilman, friend and war comrade, who is named as executor and trustee, $5,000; to Dr. E. P. Starbird, $1,000; to Miss Carrie E. Delano, employed in the Secretary of State department, $1,000; to Mary F. Nowell of Cambridge, $1,000; to Mrs. Emma J. Perry, widow of the late Herbert L. Perry of Boston, $500; to John Gardner of Brookline, $3,000; to the Thomas G. Stevenson Post No. 26, G. A. R., of Roxbury, $1,000; to the trustees of the Soldiers' Home of Massachusetts, $1,000; to the National Encampment, G. A. R., $1,000; to the Columbian Lodge of Masons, Boston, $1,000, to be kept until it amounts to $2,500, when it is to be known as the Junior Warden fund; to Margaret Langtry, $500, to enable her to continue musical studies in Berlin, but revoked in a codicil; two-fifths of the net income of the residue to be paid semi-annually to Edwin R. Olin, his son, until he is forty years old, when he is to receive two-fifths of the principal, three-fifths of the residue on the same terms to Caroline L. Olin, daughter.

The will provides that if either son or daughter die before he or she is forty years old his or her share is to go to the trustees of the Soldiers' Home of Massachusetts.

GHOST PROMENADERS INTEREST BACK BAY

The ghosts of a man and a woman who nightly walk the esplanade along the Charles are disturbing Back Bay residents. Many persons insist that they have seen these spectral promenaders, who vanish apparently into the air when pursued by the bolder and more curious. Their appearance is usually made between 2 and 3 o'clock in the morning, and the police are on the lookout. No bluecoat will admit that he has seen anything of the apparitions.

Business Success Through Publicity

No. 113

Shoe Manufacturers and the Tariff.

The determination of Congress to give the farmers, among other free things, free boots and free shoes, will make the shoe manufacturers of New England do considerable thinking. No man can tell what the effect will be on his business beyond certain general lines.

One of the certainties is this, that those shoe manufacturers who have never trade-marked their goods and have not advertised them are going to suffer greatest, whatever the competition may be, because they have no identity in the mind of the consumer.

It is also going to be very evident that the great national advertisers of shoes, the names of whose shoes are household words all over America, are going to be unaffected by the competition because people will demand their goods rather than some unknown foreign manufacturer's goods or unknown domestic line.

The best thing that a shoe manufacturer can possibly do to protect his market is to make the desirable quality of his goods known, and the only way to do that is by the right kind of advertising.

Shoes, with a few exceptions, have been sold upon price rather than quality, but the wise manufacturer of the future is going to sell upon quality first and price second, and he is going to make his shoes so well known that wearers will demand them because of their desirable quality.

A foreigner would have hard work taking the market from the great biscuit trust, or the oil trust, or the cement trust. One of the reasons why they could not affect their market is the fact that the goods made by these great companies are known in every household. Yet shoes and clothing, the very things which are most in demand, are the lines which are the least advertised.

Newspaper advertising will tell your story with a force locally that no other advertising can. It is the kind of advertising that day in and day out reaches the person with the force of an intimate friend.

The Boston American presents a splendid opportunity to shoe manufacturers who desire to trade-mark their goods and secure a wider market. If you are interested and desire further particulars, write Trade Aid Department, Boston American.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS

STOCK MARKETS CLOSE LOWER

STATE STREET, April 22—Closing selling of Steel through the morning's trading gave the market a weak tone and prices showed an average decline of ¼ point at the close. Offering of Steel seemed to come from many sources, and traders believed there was more genuine liquidation than appeared on the surface. Rumors of a change in the company were current, but not credited.

Pressure was sufficiently severe to make each Steel issue lose a half point; Reading 1⅛ and Consolidated Gas, St. Paul and Lehigh ⅞. As prices declined activity increased considerably and business did not look as if it were the usual Saturday evening up of contracts, but showed free selling.

Chemical issues continued the weakness shown during the week, but it is argued in their favor that dividend reductions had already been discounted. Little attention was given Missouri Pacific and it only sagged with the rest of the list. About the only feature of strength was Harvester, which advanced 2½ points on trading of only 1,500 shares.

On the local market there was more activity than for some time, but at the expense of prices. Continued weakness in the market for the red metal has had a discouraging effect on many and a desire to get out of the vein mine issues is developing. Calumet & Hecla, Granby and Old Dominion of the vein mines, and Nevada Consolidated and Utah Copper of the porphyries, are the only producing copper mines out of nearly three score in the United States, Mexico and Canada which can earn their present dividends on present price of copper. Twelve-cent copper long continued would mean cessation of dividends by all but thirteen producers.

The weekly statement of averages of the associated banks issued to-day shows: Reserve on all deposits increased $4,691,350; reserve on deposits other than United States increased $4,686,350; loans increased $8,350,100; specie increased $9,533,200; legal tenders decreased $423,700; deposits increased $17,672,000; circulation increased $205,200.

STATE ST. NEWS FOR INVESTORS

Every one seems inclined to await the settlement of the questions now before the Supreme Court, the outcome of the tariff discussion and the further action of the Administration toward corporate interests.

$ $ $

The importance of the decline in Steel lies in the fact that the selling is not short stock, but seems to come from good sources. Announcement made by the Steel Corporation that it had suspended work on its new wire plant, which was to have cost $1,000,000, in addition to throwing out the sixty men employed, is accepted by the Street as a hint to Congress that if general tariff reduction is begun the Steel Trust will make further curtailments.

$ $ $

There is a great deal of Rock Island influence in Missouri Pacific management as it now stands. The new interests are much more closely allied with Rock Island, which is a competitor of Missouri Pacific, than the Kuhn, Loeb people were with Union Pacific. It is understood that H. I. Miller, who has just been made a director, will gradually assume the duties of chairman of the board.

$ $ $

A Greater Steel Trust could be formed quickly if the laws permitted it. Perhaps this merger idea caused the Street to pay unusual attention to the call of Messrs. Kellogg and Severance, the "trust busters," at the office of Judge Gary, head of the Steel Trust. The visit was left unexplained by Judge Gary's office.

$ $ $

Messrs. Wiggin & Elwell say: "Copper has been weak, but we fail to find any actual sales of first hand electrolytic at under 12c New York. We look for a further decline in the metal, as present prices do not seem to attract purchasers, but we are apt to change our position at a moment's notice. The next Copper Producer's statements will undoubtedly show a decrease in the surplus."

$ $ $

Henry M. Corliss, treasurer and director of the Bullfrog Mining Syndicate and Boston-Mexico Mining Company, left Boston Thursday to visit the properties. He expects to see the first carload shipment of ore made from each while there.

SAVANNAH GETS BIG AUTO RACE

By J. C. KERRISON.

The chances of the Grand Prize Race going to Savannah this year are improving day by day, and it is now conceded that the Motor Parkway has little chance of seeing the big race in 1911. The inability to secure adequate police and military protection on the Long Island course is the main reason why Long Island will stand but little chance of securing the trophy contest.

Savannah is and has been a strong claimant for the contest, and she is being supported by many of the leading motorists of the country. It is understood that a great many of the manufacturers, who will in all likelihood make entry for the contest, are in favor of it going South.

* * *

Two hundred and twenty-six formal entries for the motor truck parade to be held this afternoon in New York had been received up to noon yesterday.

Of these, 205 are gasoline motor trucks and delivery wagons and twenty are electric vehicles. As over 800 applications for entry blanks have been received, the Motor Truck Club is confident that there will be a minimum of 400 commercial vehicles of all types in line.

* * *

"It is surprising how often one finds occasion and absolute need for the use of tire chains when touring the country, whether it be in the early Spring, the Summer, Fall or Winter. "I have toured probably as much as any one other man in this section," said a well known motorist yesterday, "and I never start on a trip without seeing that my Weed chains are within easy reach. I would as soon consider starting on a long trip without an extra shoe as I would without my Weeds.

"I consider them an insurance against accident and they have on more than one occasion proven their value in securing traction in mud or sand. I consider them as necessary as gasoline and they have proven on more than one occasion an absolute safeguard against skidding or slipping, and it is to their use that I attribute the fact that in all my touring I have not yet had an accident."

STAGE SHOW TO AID CHURCH FUND

The Mattapan Catholic Association will hold its second annual minstrel show in aid of St. Angela's Church building fund on Thursday and Friday evenings of the coming week, in Milton Town Hall, under the directions of Charles C. Dustin.

There is a large chorus made up of the best known young men and women of St. Angela's parish, and the end men have a number of jokes on professional and business men of Mattapan.

The interlocutor will be Attorney J. Frank Scannell, the president of the organization. The ends and soloists are W. H. Scannell, Miss Dolly Banefield, Miss Helen Dowling, Jack Burns, Margaret Leahy, Dr. Walter Whalen, Miss Cyril Mitsch, Joseph Dowling, Miss Mary Eaton, Thomas Meighan, James Melvin, Miss O'Neil and Miss Gillis.

Miss Mary Munier, organist at St. Angela's Church, will be the accompanist.

MORTGAGEE'S SALE.

BY virtue of the power of sale contained in a certain mortgage deed given by FRANK HURVICH to JACOB WATCHMAKER, dated June 15, 1910, and recorded with Suffolk Registry of Deeds, Book 3463, Page 113, for breach of the conditions contained in said mortgage deed and for the purpose of foreclosing, the same will be sold at public auction on the premises hereinafter described (excepting Lots 8 and B on the plans hereinafter mentioned, which lots have been released and discharged from the operation of said mortgage) in the following manner, to wit: Lots 5, 6 and 7, hereinafter described, will be sold at public auction on said Lot 5, on Friday, May 12, A. D. 1911, at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, and Lot 2, hereinafter described, will be sold at public auction on said Lot 2 at 4 o'clock on said May 12, 1911, all and singular the premises conveyed by said mortgage deed, excepting as aforesaid, namely:

A certain parcel of land with the buildings thereon, situated in that part of Boston, in said county, called Roxbury, shown as Lot 5 on a plan by F. E. Sherry, dated August, 1909, and recorded with Suffolk Deeds, Book 3401, Page 345, bounded as follows: Southwesterly, on Howland street, thirty-six (36) feet; northwesterly, by Lot 4 on said plan, eighty-seven and fifty one-hundredths (87.50) feet; northeasterly, by land now or formerly of Grace, thirty-six (36) feet; southeasterly, by Lot 6 on said plan, eighty-seven and fifty one-hundredths (87.50) feet, containing 3,150 square feet of land.

Also another parcel of land, with the buildings thereon, situated in that part of said Boston called Roxbury, shown as Lot 6, on the plan hereinafter referred to, bounded as follows: Southwesterly, on Howland street, thirty-six (36) feet; northwesterly, by Lot 5 on said plan, eighty-seven and fifty one-hundredths (87.50) feet; northeasterly, on land now or formerly of Grace, thirty-six (36) feet; southeasterly, on Lot 7 on said plan, eighty-seven and fifty one-hundredths (87.50) feet, containing 3,150 square feet of land.

Also another parcel of land, with the buildings thereon, situated in that part of Boston called Roxbury, shown as Lot 7 on a plan hereinbefore referred to and bounded as follows: Southwesterly, on Howland street, thirty-six (36) feet; northwesterly, by Lot 6 on said plan, eighty-seven and fifty one-hundredths (87.50) feet; northeasterly, by land now or formerly of Grace, thirty-six (36) feet; southeasterly, by Lot 8 on said plan, eighty-seven and fifty one-hundredths (87.50) feet, containing 3,150 square feet of land.

Also another parcel of land, with the buildings thereon, situated in that part of Boston called Roxbury, and shown as Lot 8 on a plan hereinbefore referred to and bounded as follows: Southwesterly, by Howland street, thirty-six (36) feet; northwesterly, by Lot 7 on said plan, eighty-seven and fifty one-hundredths (87.50) feet; northeasterly, by land now or formerly of Grace, thirty-six (36) feet; southeasterly, by Lot 9 on said plan, eighty-seven and fifty one-hundredths (87.50) feet, containing 3,150 square feet of land.

Also another parcel of land, with buildings thereon, situated in the town of Winthrop, said County of Suffolk, and being shown as Lot B on a plan by Whitman & Howard, dated July, 1909, duly recorded, and bounded and described as follows: Westerly, on Shirley street, thirty-eight and seven-tenths (38.7) feet; northerly, by Lot A on said plan, ninety-five and five-tenths (95.5) feet; Deeds at the end of Book 1275, thirty-three and easterly, by Lot 98 on a plan recorded with Suffolk thirty-nine one-hundredths (33.39) feet, and southerly, by Lot 101 on last-mentioned plan, ninety-one and three-tenths (91.3) feet. Said Lot B contains thirty-three and fifty-eight one-hundredths (33.58) square feet.

Also another parcel of land, with the buildings thereon, shown as Lot 2, on a plan of land in Winthrop, Mass., owned by Goldine & Frank, Whitman & Howard, civil engineers, dated January, 1909, which plan is recorded with Suffolk Deeds, said Lot 2 being bounded and described as follows: Beginning at the southeast of said Lot 2, on the westerly side of Winthrop street and thus running northerly thirty (30) feet; bounded easterly by Winthrop street as shown on said plan, thus turning and running westerly one hundred (100) feet; bounded northerly by Lot three (3), as shown on said plan, thus turning and running southerly thirty (30) feet; bounded westerly by Lot 15 as shown on said plan, thus turning and running easterly one hundred (100) feet to the point of beginning; bounded southerly on Lot one (1), as shown on said plan.

Said premises are to be conveyed subject to any and all incumbrances now of record with the accrued interest on any mortgage or mortgages now outstanding and to any and all unpaid taxes, assessments and tax titles, if any.

$500.00 will be required to be paid by the purchaser at the time of the sale of Lots 5, 6 and 7 and $300.00 at the time of the sale of said Lot 2, and the balance of each purchase, or the entire purchase, within ten days thereafter.

JACOB WATCHMAKER, Mortgagee.

The Bushmen Fear Clean Water—

And Many Americans Fear Fresh Air.

Copyright, 1911, by American-Journal-Examiner.

The small, keen-eyed Bushman is a wonderful creature—considering his lack of chance in life.

He can crawl for miles on his stomach and surprise the ostrich on its nest. He uses his bows and arrows and spears with great skill—BUT HE CANNOT STAND WATER.

He dreads water—except as a drink—and takes little of it even in that way.

He never by any chance bathes with water. Not even his face or his hands will he touch with water—he believes it is very bad for the health—and when time and accumulated dirt compel him to think of his toilet, he employs methods just as well left undescribed

As the Bushman feels toward fresh water, so the American, very many of him, feels toward fresh air.

Rooms full of men at work are closed tight. Ventilating apparatus put in by building owners are shut down by those whose lungs need ventilating.

Air expelled from the lungs is full of poison—it carries off with it the poisons of the system. Air breathed twice is vile. Yet more than three-quarters of all Americans fight against fresh air as though the life-giving oxygen were something to be feared, and against drafts as though they were deadly.

The human being living in a current of fresh air is comparatively, like the beautiful trout, full of life and color, living in the moving stream. And the human being living in dead, stagnant air is, comparatively, like the sucker lying at the bottom of the stagnant pond on the mud, sluggish and unwholesome. Here is an intelligent reader's letter on fresh air:

Editor AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—Your editorial on a United States Board of Health was fine, and I hope you will continue to have these editorials frequently and enlighten the people still further on the value of fresh air.

It is surprising to see how many people think a draft of fresh air will hurt them. Here is something that does not cost a penny, but is greater than all the tonics a doctor can order. I have noticed in an office in which I work that the majority of persons employed there are afraid of opening a window, even on delightful Spring days. In our office is a member of the State militia who kicks like a steer if a window is opened. I don't wonder that there is so much sickness among militia soldiers when they are called into service if this man is a sample of it.

It seems to me the building department is lax in this matter of ventilation.

Even societies for the prevention of tuberculosis violate their own instruction. At an exhibition a year or so ago, where hundreds of people tramped around causing dust to rise in the air, and germs, there was not a window open.

Go still deeper into this subject for the public health.

Yours respectfully, W. A. S.

Where Does This WOMAN Belong?

She Asks the Question, and a Reasonable Question It is

Copyright, 1911, by American-Journal-Examiner.

We printed yesterday a picture of a man who had been told that he couldn't have work because he was too old.

As the man was considered too old to work, yet too healthy for the hospital, too respectable to beg, and yet too honest to steal, the question was asked: "Where does this man belong?"

A woman, whose name is not published, asks the same question.

Wise members of society will find it rather hard to answer. Here is the letter:

Editor AMERICAN.

Dear Sir—I was much interested in your editorial—"Where does this man belong?" Now will your readers please tell me where "this" woman belongs? I am the wife of a mechanic earning $16 per week and not steady work at that. I have six children of school age and a mother to keep on that sum. Recently I left a sick bed and applied for medical treatment at a public hospital. Asked my income. I told the truth and said $16. Thereupon I was told I was in a position to pay for private treatment, so I said to the nurse in charge: "Do you think $16 is such a princely sum to support and pay all expenses for a family of nine?" And she said: "I am sure I do not know." "But," I asked, "what is a person to do who is sick and cannot afford to pay for a physician's call ($2) and necessary medicines?" Again she replied: "I do not know." And so I was turned away. Is this right? "Where do I belong?"

A WOMAN.

This woman with a husband getting sixteen dollars a week, IRREGULARLY, has to feed herself, her mother, six children and her husband, and to pay rent with the sixteen dollars weekly—or as much as the husband gives to her.

When she goes to a hospital for treatment and tells the truth she is told that a woman with the very large income of sixteen dollars a week can afford to pay a doctor, and she is turned away. (Remember that when the hospitals send begging appeals.)

The nurse who turns her away gets twenty-five dollars a week—and gets her board besides and has no children or husband to feed.

The woman's question, "Where do I belong?" cannot be answered very satisfactorily. But it can be answered partially.

She belongs, for one thing, among the women that ought to be working extremely hard to get votes for women.

There are hundreds of thousands of such women, and other hundreds of thousands not even as well off.

If these women could get the vote, if they could be taught to THINK and stand and vote together, they would compel some of the big men at the top of the heap to consider this question, "Where do I belong?" and make some effort to answer it.

LETTERS FROM AMERICAN READERS

GOVERNMENT CONTROL.

Editor AMERICAN:

The Commonwealth of Massachusetts, despairing of its ability to compel the New Haven to make its acts conform with the law, yielded and made the law conform with the acts; thereby assuming the position of the famous Dogberry: "But how, this colossal octopus will not obey the law?" "Why, change the law to suit him; and a pox on him for an arrant knave."

After this exhibition of the inflexible dignity and majesty of the law, it is not at all surprising that the New Haven should proceed to reduce the number of feet in the statute mile. No theft is too small for a great corporation. But if the railroads realized the popular feeling toward them and the rapid growth of sentiment for taking them over, and running them in the interest of the public, instead of an insignificant fraction of the stockholders numerically, it is doubtful whether they would be quite so unremitting in pilfering pence from the public on all possible occasions.

On the other hand, if the people knew how easy it would be to take over the roads, and secure the benefits that are secured in most civilized countries, they would not submit to being plundered as at present.

It is not at all necessary for the government either to raise money and buy the roads on the one hand, or to confiscate them on the other. All that is needed is to get the "control" in the technical sense of the word. If you or I wanted the "control" of a road, we should have to own a majority of the stock; Morgan, or Hill, or Rockefeller can get it by owning 10 per cent., or less; the government ought to get it with the ownership of 1 per cent. The roads would still belong to the present owners; hence there would be no confiscation of property. Interest on the bonds and dividends on the stock would be paid out of earnings, just as now; but there would be a good chance to squeeze out the water. The superintendents, managers, agents, employees generally would continue to operate the roads. Rebates and other underhand practices would be discontinued; great economies could be effected; and the interest of the public could receive some consideration.

DR. PARKHURST'S ARTICLE

THE QUESTION OF PAY FOR TEACHERS

Written for the Boston American

By Dr. C. H. Parkhurst

Copyright, 1911, by the National News Association

A LETTER received from a male teacher in New York commences as follows: "I have been asked by many men teachers concerning the intended reduction in men teachers' salary. It is the general impression among the men that you are in favor of such reduction. In order to bring you to our side I have undertaken to write you this letter."

A man who, like myself, is in favor of large salaries for large men is in no need of indoctrination. My correspondent's letter is a good one; its points are well taken, but the soil upon which he is scattering his fertilizer is already fairly prolific so far as concerns the matter immediately in hand.

No man who has taught—provided he is instinct with the teaching impulse—fails to appreciate the exactions of his profession. The unfortunate fact in the case is that those who have never taught have not that appreciation, and therefore cheapen the teacher's work in their estimate, and consequently in the amount of its due compensation.

There is neither the significance nor the dignity popularly accorded to the work requiring to be done in the schoolroom that properly belong to it. It is not generally realized, apparently, that it is there that the coming generation is, day by day, being moulded, and that the trend of thought, the quality of character and consequently the direction of coming events are being determined.

What the American world will be in its domestic, social and political character during the next fifty years depends principally on our schools, and our schools depend on our teachers. The schoolmaster and the schoolmistress are, in a very broad sense, the makers of our history.

We farm out our responsibilities without being conscientiously interested in those to whom the responsibilities are delegated. We give to them little thought, and so come to suppose that they are worth but little thought, and consequently are willing to buy their services at the lowest possible market price, just as we buy clothes to wear and mutton to eat.

We Should Always Strive to Win Our Ideal

If the accustomed wages of a teacher are reduced, one of two results is certain to follow: Either a sense of the injustice done him will prevent his bringing to his work the full measure and quality of his capabilities, or his place will be filled by a man of inferior scholarship or teachership.

Either of which alternatives means a distinct deprivation in the efficiency of our schools.

In a world that is not itself ideal we cannot always insist upon the pursuance of ideal methods, but we work to the disadvantage of ourselves and others unless we keep the ideal distinctly in view even when compelled to adopt compromise measures.

When we cannot do what we would we must do what we can, but even when doing the second best thing we cannot afford to lose sight of the thing that is first best. Otherwise we shall become satisfied with what is good and never attain to what is better. In slavery times fugitives reached Canada by steering toward the North Star.

Now the ideal of a child is that in which it is brought up by its parents and held in close attachment to it own home.

The following is a picture, and not a fancy picture either, of a certain home that once existed in the country and which approached as closely to the ideal as is often attainable.

The parents considered themselves responsible for their children in every respect. They very distinctly understood that was what parents were for. Incubators and mechanical mothers they relegated to the poultry yard.

The children in the household that we are describing were not committed to the care of a nurse. A nurse is not a feature of an ideal home, but is an afterthought that has been fostered by the impaired physical vigor of mothers and by their ambition to create new obligations for themselves to the entire or partial neglect of the obligations that God and Nature created for them.

A Mother Who Made the Home Her Headquarters

The mother was left free to do this since she did not spend her time at the dressmaker's, the milliner's, the club or the opera house, nor expend her voice and strength going out upon the highway and shouting for her rights.

Moreover, she loved her children, which is a rather inestimable feature of motherhood. She was also her own family physician. She was sufficiently intimate with her children to know and understand their physical condition. In that way she anticipated the encroachment of disease and avoided the necessity of getting one poison out of their system by the introduction of other poisons in the shape of pills and powders.

The home was also a schoolhouse in which the parents were the preceptors, and the children's intellectual regimen was ordered in a way that was compatible with their physical and moral health, and not so extreme in its exactions as to make them hate study—as most schoolchildren do—or as to drive them to nervous prostration or incipient lunacy, as often results under the high-pressure system in vogue in the ordinary schoolroom.

Of course, the parents were also the priest and priestess of the home, which insured that the religious nurture of the children was not neglected and that they did not grow up religiously emaciated through being unwholesomely fed on questionable religion imported from outside.

All in all, it was pretty nearly an ideal home and a very safe and sweet place to grow up in.

> Nor love thy life, nor hate; but what thou liv'st
> Live well: how long or short permit to heaven.

He Writes About Some Wise Sayings

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

PA got Ma mad aggena last nite. Ma's Ma was to the house for a other visit, the saim as she was a few months ago, & she had a book with her called Wise Sayings of Wise Men. Thare was things in the book about Solomon & Mister David & Mister Shakespeer & Mister Erlanger.

I am sick and tired of heering about all them old geezers, sed Pa to Ma's Ma wen she opened the book & beegan to read. I hoap you dont call King Solomon a wise guy, sed Pa. Why, the poor sucker got married hundreds of times. If he was a wise guy, Pa sed, my naim is Socrates, Shakespeer & Co. Limited.

Husband, sed Ma, I wish you wud be vary careful the way you speek to mother. I cant help it sed Pa, all this stuff about the wisdom of the past ages maiks me sick & tired. All that the wise old fellers of the dead days used to do, sed Pa, was to set around in a tavern and make epi-grams. They doant call them taverns any moar, sed Pa, the wives call them gin mills. & the only epigrams we have to-day is such dethless epigrams as A Littel Moar Of The Saim. But I want you to know that the men of the days gone by nevver held a candle to the men of the present time, in brains, bulk or bankroll. Look at Ajax & Achilles, sed Pa. Look at Horashus & Hector. All they had, sed Pa, was a lot of bunk war cries and a historian. Wry, sed Pa, if I had a historian like Homer what do you think the future wud think about my naim?

I wud hait to tell you, sed Ma's Ma, provided Mister Homer toald the truth. I doant think it wud be anything for reading matter in the primary skool books. However, I wish that you wud keep still now & let mother read a few of her Wise Sayings of Wise Men.

The first saying that I am going to read, sed Ma's Ma, goes like this:

The way of the transgressor is hard.

That is sum saying, sed Pa. I havent heard it laitly, but you can play it two ways, beekaus I felt as feerce this morning as you look this eevning.

Ma's Ma didant pay any attenshun to Pa. She red her next saying of a wise man. It was a Latin saying, & wen it was made into the English it ment Hitch Yure Wagon to a Star.

That is a bad sistem, sed Pa, many a poor man has hitched his wagon to a star, so as to speak. Sheriff Chanler hitched up with a star, Pa sed, if I am not grately mistaken, & the star dident do a thing to him.

I will not have this kind of conduck in my dauters house, sed Ma's Ma. Nether you or I must leave for the eevning.

I wuddent chase you out for the wurld, sed Pa, cum on, Bobbie, you & me will go oaver & see sum moving picters.

The minnit we got out Pa beegan to laff about Ma's Ma. Poor old gurl, sed Pa, she talks about Shakespeer & Solomon & Erlanger as if there were only a few wise men in the world. But thare is no use, Bobbie, sed Pa, in trying to hurt the feelings of yure grandma by calling her down. She is like a lot of the mother-in-laws, sed Pa, many are called but few are frozen.

How to be Beautiful

Mme. Cavalieri, the most famous of living beauties, tells what every woman wants to know in a 32-page book, "My Secrets of Beauty," which will be given free in the Greater Boston district with to-morrow's Sunday AMERICAN.
